PLA Inducts Hunter Into Hall Of Fame

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The 38th Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE), held at the state Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg, was kicked off Thursday evening with opening ceremonies held in the Small Arena.

The KILE is the state's premier livestock show and features more than 1,700 sheep with two national shows; a large number of swine with two swine sales; beef cattle shows with three rated nationally; and a horse show that has continued to expand year after year.

In fact, this year has been dedicated to the equines and officially has been declared "The Year of the Horse."

The opening ceremonies held Thursday started with a welcome and introduction by Dennis Grumbine, as well as a welcome by Tony Wagner, Pennsylvania deputy secretary of agriculture.

Charles Itle, Farm Show manager, gave an overview of the 38th KILE and the changes to this years shows. Itle said that the size of the horse shows is tremendous and that this year, for the first time, a KILE activity actually started Wednesday.

The Appaloosa show was held Wednesday evening, an expansion over last year by adding an extra day to the horse showing for a total of six days.

Itle said the highlights of the evening shows includes Friday night's challenge of the breeds horse competition with 13 entries representing for the first time all seven breeds — this year for the first time, there will be Percherons, Morgans and half-Arabians added to the four other breeds to add more dimension to the challenge.

And he talked about tonight's evening program of 6-horse hitch competitions, with eight six-horse hitches competing in an event that qualifies the participants for the national event.

Beverly Gruber, who coordinates a lot of the event activities and promotions, reported to the crowd that advertising for KILE was expanded this past year to include three radio stations and some television advertising in an attempt to attract more of the general public to the event.

There has also been an expansion in the number of commercial exhibitors at the show.

However, the KILE opening ceremony is traditionally the time when the Pennsylvania Livestock Association announces and presents its annual inductee into its Hall of Fame.

PLA began its Hall of Fame recognitions in the very early 1970s and photographs of the winners are hung on a large placard on the back wall of Small Arena in the Farm Show Complex.

This year's inductee into the PLA Hall of Fame was George Hunter, of Stoneboro.

Hunter, 77, has shown sheep at KILE every year, and has sheep entered for this year. A Penn State University alumnus, he has worn a variety of hats serving various livestock breed organizations and dedicated much time to the improvement and consistency of competitions, support and educational events.

Canadian Farmers Visit Manheim Farmers

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Because Manheim Farm Show "sticks specifically to agriculture," many school children are bused to the event from up to an hour's drive away. The reason for the attraction to this event is said to be because that when the children get off the buss, they don't look for the midway rides because there are none. The children look for the animals and the tractors.

Manheim farmers who are officals of the farm show pride themselves on the fact that there are only three small rides for children, and everything alse at the show is either good food from one of the 20 different community non-profit organizations or something related to the area's agriculture.

Wednesday, October 5, 1994

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds continued to be only about moderate. Seller offerings varied, but were fully adequate overall. Live supplies were moderate; weights were in a full range and mostly desirable to slightly heavy. Processing schedules remained very heavy. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 52 to 63 cents. Trade sentiment was steady. Bone-in breasts were adequate to well cleared. Supplies of boneless skinless breasts varied from plant to plant, but were adequate overall. Leg items and wings were generally adequate with leg quarters in the closest balance.

Oklahoma City Feeder Cattle

Oklahoma City, Okla.
Wednesday, October 5, 1994

OKLAHOMA NATIONAL STOCKYARDS WEEKLY CATTLE SUMMARY: Compared to last week. Feeder steers steady. Feeder heifers steady to $1.00 lower. Steer and heifer calves mostly steady after a slow opening Demand good for yearlings Calf demand opened light but turned very good by noon. Yearling weigh-ups average to full. Yearling flesh improved from last week and light to medium. Weigh-ups were detrimental for buyers but the improved flesh scores helped to balance the condition scale. Calf condition was highly varied from fleshy and soft to slightly thin and weaned.

Quality of supply plain to mostly average. A few isolated thunder- storms appearing in spots but best chance for overall rain is Thursday. A good rain at this time would greatly enhance wheat pasture outlook. Slaughter cows mostly $2.50 lower. Slaughter bulls $2.00-$3.00 lower. Packer demand fair to moderate with moderate trade. 737 cows and bulls sold with 35 percent replacements. Receipts this week 9,900; last week 8,628; last year 9,835. OPINION

Organize To Improve Farm Prices

Family vacation. A time for relaxing and enjoying quality time with family. I started from home excited about having a few days at a lake shore resort. Along with some family fun, I looked forward to a welcome relief from the day-to-day work routine.

Vacation started on Monday. All was fine until Wednesday morning. That's when my peace of mind got rudely interrupted. That's when I read the morning paper and looked at the commodity markets. I learned that corn in central Illinois was priced 0.5-cents per bushel cheaper than on the same date a year ago. On the same market: soybeans down $1.05 per bushel, wheat on the Minneapolis market down 74-cents per bushel, hogs on the interior Iowa markets down $7.00 per cwt., and steers on the Texas/Oklahoma market down $8.75 per cwt. All prices compared to a year ago on the same date.

I resumed having fun with the family, but reading the paper distracted my mind and my concentration. I started asking myself a serious question over and over again. Why should farmers be punished at the marketplace just because, with the help of some good weather, they did a superior job of producing?

The answer is THEY SHOULDN'T! Next question? What can farmers do about it? I tried to mentally analyze how sellers in other industries price their products at the marketplace. The answer is: they put a price tag on their products before they offer the product for sale.

Realistically, pricing non-farm merchandise is not as simplistic as those few words make it sound. Other industry sellers have to meet their competition and offer supplies in the proper quantity and quality to fill the needs of the intermediate and ultimate buyers.

But there's an important difference between how non-ag merchandisers and farmers/stockmen handle what's known as over-supply. Certainly, there are short period each year when farmers usually oversupply the market. After all, one grain harvest brings in 365 days of supply in a very short time, yet it takes a year to consume the supply. Livestock seasonally oversupplies the market, as does milk. And, yet this temporary glut on the markets causes a lot of people in government, in the commodity pits, and throughout the food chain to scream "Surplus! Let's lower the price!" This happens despite long-term historic evidence that processors buy, process and resell everything American farmers produce.

With the singular exception of raw agricultural products, merchandisers use a variety of ways to fill consumers' needs and manage sellers' supplies. We see them every day advertised as 1/2 price sales, end-of-the-month sales, end-of-the-year sales specials, buy-one-get-one-free specials and other come-ons that entice consumers to buy a temporary over-supply.

However, you never see a non-agricultural merchandiser use cut-price ideas to sell 100% of his or her entire supply. That merchandising malfunction seems reserved for farmers and livestock producers. When ag commodity prices are cut, the lower price applies to 100% of the farmers' supply, not just the small percentage that might temporarily burden the market. That's good business for the buyers, but lousy business for farm commodity producers.

The next question I asked myself was "can farmers use any of those ideas to improve their pricing system?" The answer is, "Of course, they can!" And farmers would benefit from such changed merchandising practices.

All these helpful merchandising ideas from outside of agriculture are rightfully a form of "supply management." Another name for learning to clear the market of temporary oversupply is "smart marketing"—take your lumps on a small portion of your supply, but maintain a profitable price structure on the vast majority of your supply.

In National Farmers we call this maintenance of price structure on the vast majority of our supply "group marketing" or "collective bargaining." We use these merchandising tools because they work. And, the primary reason they work is because the people who use them successfully are organized to make them work. Our "merchandising tools" will work for all producers of all commodities coast to coast when they decide to organize for the singular purpose of improving their prices.

I hope the nation's farmers make that decision soon. When they do, I'll have much more pleasant family vacations.

National Farmers Organization

Now Is The Time

To Check For Corn Uniformity

Stand uniformity is almost as important in determining corn yields as is the number of corn seeds planted per acre.

Corn harvesting is an excellent time for corn growers to evaluate the uniformity of their corn stands. Missing plants in the row will reduce total yield. In addition, when two or more corn plants are planted too close together, yields will also be reduced.

While riding on the combine or corn picker, growers should evaluate fields to determine if the plant populations are too low or if the stand is uneven. If it is determined that either conditions exist, you have time to find out why.

If the problem is the planter, you have sufficient time to fix the cause before next spring and planting begins.

To Plan For Winter Grain Seeding

Now is the time to plan for winter grain seeding.

Some factors to consider are variety selection, planting date, and seeding rate.

Variety selection is perhaps the most cost effective way to control many of the diseases of small grain. Selection of high yielding varieties which are resistant to the common diseases of the area will go a long way in maximizing yields.

Penn State Agronomy Department evaluates many small grain varieties each year and publishes a report of their disease resistance and overall yield potential. These are available at your local cooperative extension office.

Planting date is a critical aspect of winter grain management. Seeding too early increases the potential for many diseases while seeding too late will have the plants too small to survive the winter.

The Penn State Agronomy Guide has suggested seeding dates for different areas of the state. Seeding rate should be based on the number of plants per acre that are needed to produce an optimum yield.

Optimum yields are most likely when the number of plants per acre are between 1.2 and 1.5 million plants per acre. That computes to between 18 and 20 seeds per foot of row using a 7-inch row and assuming a 90 percent germination.

When planting after the suggested date, seeding rates should be increased by 30 percent to insure sufficient plants survive the winter to produce an optimum yield.

To Plant Winter Grains Properly

There are several factors to consider when planting winter grains. Site selection is very important.

Winter grains do not like wet soils. Under wet soil conditions, small grain crops experience excessive winter kill, especially barley.

Small grains should not be planted in the same field for two consecutive years because of disease control, especially wheat.

Soil fertility is very important. Soil pH should be between 6.0 and 7.0. Wheat will tolerate the lower pH while barley does much better at a pH of 7.0. Winter grains also experience significant levels of winter kill if the phosphorous levels are low.

Potassium levels should be in the optimum level. Nitrogen should be applied in the spring following planting. However, if the field receives regular application of livestock or poultry manure, additional nitrogen may not be needed and may increase the amount of lodging.

Tillage must be good enough to insure uniform seed depth. Adjust the amount of tillage to soil conditions at the time of planting and type of drill that is used.

Feather Prof's Footnote: "Obstacles are those frightful things you see when you take your mind off your goals."

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

ON BEING LIFE-SIZED
October 9, 1994

Background Scripture:
Judges 6:1 through 8:21
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 33:10-22

For me, Gideon has always been one of these larger-than-life heroes of the Bible. But, now, just having re-read that story once again, I am not so sure. Today he seems more life-sized.

What makes me say that? Well, for one thing, if you read the whole story, Gideon is not exactly a man of overwhelming faith, is he? When an angel of the Lord salutes him with "The Lord is with you, you mighty man of valor," how does Gideon respond? "Pray, sir, if the Lord is with us, why then has all this befallen us? And where are all his wonderful deeds which our fathers recounted to us...?"

When the angel assures him that the Lord will be with him he answers: "Pray, Lord, how can I deliver Israel? Behold, my clan is the weakest in Manasseh, and I am the least in my family" (6:15). And God answers, "But I will be with you, and you shall smite the Midianites as one man" (6:16). And the Lord also provided him with an impressive demonstration of his power when Gideon brought his sacrifice to him. "Then Gideon perceived that he was the angel of the Lord" (6:22).

TOO AFRAID

So, now Gideon is ready to obey his revelation? Not entirely, for when God tells him to pull down the altar to Baal and the Asherah beside it, Gideon agrees, "but because he was too afraid of his family and the men of the town to do it by day, he did it by night" (6:27). Finally, we are told, "the Spirit of the Lord took possession of Gideon" and he begins to rally the various tribes to come to his assistance in carrying out the word of the Lord. Surely now Gideon was a man of great faith!

No, not really. With his forces assembled, Gideon suddenly decides he wants just one more demonstration of God's power: he will lay a fleece of wool on the threshing floor and if, in the morning, the fleece has dew upon it and the ground does not, "I will know that thou wilt deliver Israel by my hand" (6:37). Just one more assurance—and God does as Gideon asks.

Now, is he ready? Then Gideon said to God, "Let not thy anger burn against me, let me speak but this once; pray, let me make trial only this once with the fleece; pray, let it be dry only on the fleece, and on all the ground let there be dew" (6:39). The writer of Judges tells us, "And God did so that night..." Gideon took his forces out into the field near the encampment of Midian.

ONE MORE TIME!

I wish I could say that Gideon's faith never wavered after that, but there was one more occasion. After, at God's command, he pared down his forces to just 300 men, the Lord says to Gideon, "Arise, go down against the camp; for I have given it into your hand. But if you fear to go down, go down to the camp with Purah your servant; and you shall hear what they say, and afterward your hand shall be strengthened to go down against the camp" (7:9, 10).

Was Gideon still fearful after all of God's assurances? "Then he went down with Purah his servant to the outposts of the armed men that were in the camp." Only after he heard a Midianite tell of a fearful dream of falling victim to Gideon and his Israelites did Gideon get the courage to do what God had told him.

That's why I say that rather than larger-than-life, Gideon appears to me more life-sized, more like me and perhaps you. And I'm glad that Gideon was life-sized, because if he could rise above his fears and serve God, so can we.

The performance leader in this maturity. 3525 is a widely adapted, stable, high-yielding hybrid. Tall plant type, excellent for grain and silage. Late flowering will limit northward movement. Outstanding ear flex and good ear attachment. Strong performer under stress.

110 CRM
Record setting yields. This exciting hybrid provides impressive early growth, strong stalks and roots, exceptional stress tolerance, outstanding drydown and lengthy staygreen. Widely adapted to varying soil types, tillage methods and populations. Well-suited for corn silage. Avoid conditions where gray leaf spot is a higher risk.

NEW 3346
113 CRM
Drought tolerant yield leader. Outstanding yield potential and excellent agronomics. Exceptional stalk strength and staygreen. Early growth is slower than average. Expect some early growth "purpling" but excellent stand establishment. Strong silage potential.

Top-end yields. Exceptional early growth. This hybrid features outstanding stalks, lengthy staygreen and very good drought tolerance. Above average grain appearance, test weight and grain protein content. A good dual-purpose hybrid for grain or silage.

IMPORTANT: Each hybrid has unique strengths and considerations. Contact your Pioneer sales representative for more complete information on these and other Pioneer hybrids.

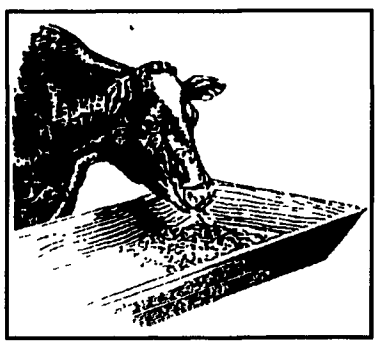
Reduce Silage Fermentation Losses With



EarlySile™
Silage Treatment
Available in water-soluable and dry flowable forms.

Silage Fermentation The Price You Pay
University research has shown that even with good silage, including the normally easy-to-ensile corn silage, losses in dry matter and energy will occur.
REMEMBER The Faster The pH Is Dropped, The Lower the Heat In The Silo, Minimizing Energy And Dry Matter Loss!!
LACTIC ACID BACTERIA (LABs) produce lactic acid by fermenting plant sugars. Researchers have shown that inoculants must provide 100,000 colony-forming units (CFU) of LABs per gram of silage to enhance fermentation.
ENZYMES break down complex carbohydrates in the forage to simple sugars. The availability and the abundance of these sugars determine how fast the LABs produce lactic acid, which lowers the pH.
The ingredients in Early Sile™ result in a rapid pH drop.

Both EarlySile™ forms contain the following active ingredients:
SEVERAL DIFFERENT TYPES OF CARBOHYDRATE-ACTIVE ENZYMES break down complex carbohydrates to simple sugars, providing food for the lactic-acid bacteria.
TWO FERMENTABLE SUGARS provide a ready source of sugars fro crops containing low-carbohydrate levels.
LACTIC ACID BACTERIA insure a proper amount of silage specific bacteria. Early Sile™ adds 100,000 live bacteria per gram of silage. These bacteria are selected from strains that occur in silage, not dairy products.
PROPIONIC ACID BACTERIA are added to help control mold production.
MINERALS are necessary for rapid bacteria growth and maximum acid production.
SPECIAL CARRIERS protect the stability and viability of both enzymes and lacits. The granular mix assures good flow and easy application, with no dust. The water-soluble mix dispenses rapidly, with no lumps to plug nozzles.

Along with TOP SILAGE MANAGEMENT, the level of success you achieve with this silage treatment depends on thorough and consistent application through your silage. If possible, apply EARLY SILE ™ using a calibrated applicator, mounted on the chopper or blower.

Conservation Districts To Host Demonstration

THOMPSONTOWN (Juniata Co.) — With residential communities in close proximity to farming operations and to better utilize liquid dairy and hog manure for the benefit of crop production, several county conservation districts are planning to hold field days in October to introduce advanced technology in disposal methods of liquid manure in an environmentally sound manner. Mark your calendar for liquid dairy and hog manure field demonstrations, nutrient management, and compaction presentations.

The first field day is scheduled for Tuesday, October 11 for the Juniata County Conservation District from 1 p.m.–4 p.m. at the Art Zug Dairy Farm. Directions:—take Rt. 322 east or west, then take Thompsontown Exit, travel into Thompsontown, west on SR3002 (Old Route 22), in Thompsontown Borough, North on SR2009, 2–2 1/2 miles on left. Watch for signs.

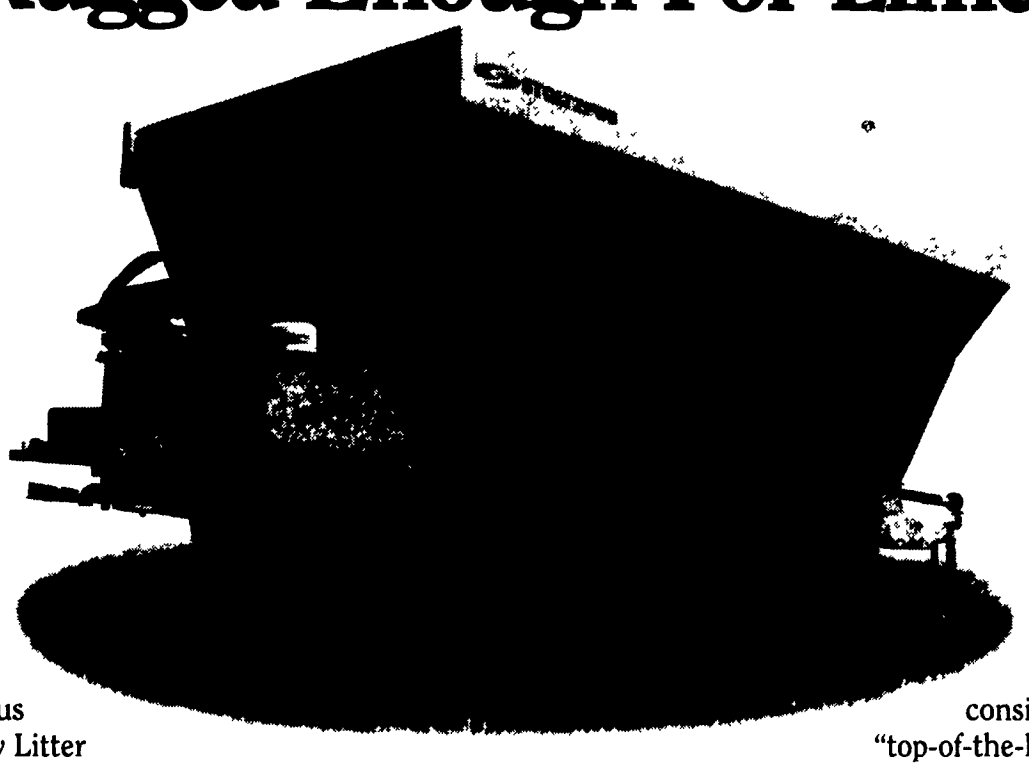
The One Spreader Big Enough For Poultry Litter, Rugged Enough For Lime.



The Stoltzfus Poultry Litter Spreader is specifically designed for the demands of this challenging job. The 20 foot hopper holds a whopping 400 cubic foot load, meaning fewer trips for you. The big 30-inch drag chain moves large volumes of litter fast. And the dual hydraulic spinners spread a wide, uniform pattern up to 40 feet wide.

But its real beauty may be its versatility. Now you can spread fertilizer, stockpiled lime, compost,poultry litter and more, all with one machine.

Long considered "top-of-the-line" ag spreaders, many Stoltzfus Spreaders are still in use after 20 years. That makes a Stoltzfus Spreader preferred not only for quality and performance, but also for terrific economy in the long run.

Sure you can settle for buying on initial price alone. But with a Stoltzfus Spreader you won't be shopping for another spreader just a couple years down the line.

Labor Issues on Dairy Farms

No matter how much automation is installed, dairy farming still requires many hours of labor to tend to the animals 365 days a year. Also, the people working with the herd must be skilled and well trained as more technical programs and equipment are introduced and higher and more economical milk production is strived for. Whether it is a family farm or a large partnership or corporation farm, the dilemma is not only where to find the help, but, once they are trained, how do you keep them.

This year Chester County Extension will be offering a two-day workshop on Labor Issues and Managing Human Resources on large and small farms. This program is an outgrowth of the Dairy MAP (Management And Profitability) workshops that were conducted in 1993 and 1994 and that will again be offered in 1995. The dates for all these workshop modules will be in future columns and newsletters, but in this column I would like to focus on some key considerations when working with employees, whether it is family members or outside help.

1. Communications: Probably the one biggest cause of labor problems is a lack of communications. When we talk about employee, that means all the help on the farm: - the spouse, the children, the parents or in-laws, as well as the hired employee. Does the worker know exactly what is expected of him or her? Is the employee given compliments for a job well done or do they only hear from the boss when something goes wrong? Does the employer listen to suggestions and concerns from the people who are doing the everyday chores? Does the employee get conflicting orders from more than one person on the farm? The list goes on, but you get the idea.
2. Training: It is the responsibility of the owner or manager to properly train the labor force if they expect to receive quality work in return. This also includes an emphasis on safety around the farm. Don't complain about poor performance if the worker does not have a complete understanding of how you want the chore done. Also don't assign tasks to your help, especially children, that is beyond their capabilities - that is asking for trouble and possibly a serious accident.
3. Working Conditions: More problems develop over working conditions than over salary issues. Does the hired help always get stuck with the most undesirable chores? Give them a break once in awhile and let them go to town for the machinery parts or mow the hay. If an employee has a boss that works along with them and doesn't mind doing some of those messy jobs occasionally, the atmosphere around the farm will be much more pleasant.
4. Compensation & Incentives: Today, especially in a surburban/rural county such as Chester, it is difficult to compete with industry's wage scale. However, there are still people who enjoy working with animals on farms as long as they receive a fair salary. Have a clear understanding on what the salary for a specific number of hours a week will be and if extra time is required, either pay overtime or offer them compensatory time-off. You cannot expect your help to work an unlimited amount of hours without some addtional compensation. If you are going to offer an incentive program, be sure that the measure that the incentive is related to, such as low bacteria count, is an area that the employee can directly influence during his or her normal work day.

These are just a few of the key points that will be discussed in the Labor Issues Workshop. No matter what size farm you have, consider enrolling in the program when the dates are announced.

Pa. DHIA Announces Ted Brown Director of Finance and Personnel

PaDHIA manager, Dave Slusser announces the employment of Frederick J. Brown (Ted) as Director of Finance and Personnel. Ted, his wife Gloria, and their two sons Dustyn and Adam have been residents of State College, Pa. since 1984. Ted came to us from Unico & HFL Corporation of State College, where he was Accounting Manager/Controller, and before that Swistock Associates Coal Corporation of Clearfield. He was born and raised on an 1100 acre cattle farm near Clearfield, where they fed as many as 500 head of Hereford cattle and 200 Hereford calves per year.

The Finance and Personnel Director develops and maintains the cooperative's financial reporting system, preparing monthly and annual financial reports to the Board and Management Staff. He will prepare cost analysis information to Department Heads and the Manger so all involved with the Cooperative can more efficiently provide DHIA services to the members.

Ted graduated from St. Francis College with a B.S. Degree in Business Administration. He passed the Certified Public Accounting Exams, and is a member of the Institute of Management Accountants. During his prior employment years, Ted had attended seminars on taxes, hiring and firing, collection and the law, and accounting review course work.

We at PaDHIA are pleased to have Ted with us. His business experience coupled with his farm background gives him a good understanding of farmers and their cooperatives.

Donough Has Supreme Champion Steer

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — "We can only have one winner," said Bob Livingston, judge from York Co. "But it (the youth show) is really about kids. So, let's give everyone a round of applause."

The top of the 4-H steer show became the supreme champions at the Manheim Fair Tuesday night. Travis Donough, 14, had the champion 4-H steer from the light heavyweight class that went on to be the supreme champion of the show.

And Casey High had the reserve champion in the 4-H show with his heavyweight steer that went on to be the reserve supreme champion of the show.

Both these champion steers were ornery and extremely hard to handle on that particular night. The supreme champion kicked at Judge Livingston every time he came near, and the reserve supreme champion just would not set up, pushing at the halter at every opportunity. Both Donough and High did a masterful job of controlling the steers and their own emotions in light of a very difficult showing situation for them.

In the FFA show Dave Bollinger had the champion from the medium weight class, and Tracy Bollinger had the reserve champion from the heavyweight class.

Huntsberger, Strathemyer Families Honored In York County

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — Two unique York County farming operations have been honored by the county's agri-business community.

The Geary Huntsberger family, Etters, received the Farm Family award, and Strathmeyer Forests, Warrington Township, was named Ag Industry award winner during the sixth annual Agriculture Recognition dinner, January 28, at Wisehaven Hall. more than 200 attended the award program, sponsored by The York County Penn State Cooperative Extension Service, Farmers' Association and Chamber of Commerce.

The Huntsberger family operates Corn Hill Farms, with some 2500 acres of owned, rented and sharecropped land planted in corn, hay and small grains. In 1946, after a stint of service with the Navy, Geary and his wife Rosemary returned to the family farm in northern York County.

Always innovative, Huntsberger is likely the only farmer in the county who moves equipment with a barge. Many years ago, he ventured into farming islands mid-river in the Susquehanna, including Shelley's, Hill and Three Mile islands. Huntsberger was also one of the first area growers to dry corn. His progressiveness and management abilities earned him a Master Farmer award in 1979.

Geary is semi-retired, but still handles equipment maintenance and the barging of machinery to the island acreage. His son, Robert, is farm manager, handles field work and purchases and oversees Corn Hill Farm's two employees. Rosemary manages the farm's accounting.

A long-time agriculture activist, Geary has served as chairman of both the county and state ASCS committees, is a member of the Dauphin Deposit Bank board of directors, the Newberry Township school board and the TMI Citizens' Advisory Board.

Robert is an associate director of the York County Conservation District, committeeman for the ASCS district and a member of the Pennsylvania Farmers Association legislative committee. He and his wife Sue have two children.

Strathmeyer Forests' roots in York County reach back more than 90 years. Nearly a century ago, Charles H. Strathmeyer, grandfather to current president Fred Strathmeyer, Sr., began selling Christmas trees at his general store at Philadelphia and Hartley streets in York.

His son, Charles, founded a production operation in the Depression years, selling seedlings grown from the seeds of pine cones that he collected. By the 1960s, seedling sales had surpassed Christmas trees as the prime Strathmeyer business, and acreage was expanded.

Some three million Strathmeyer seedlings are now sold annually to growers ranging in size from a few acres to a few thousand acres. Strathmeyers also stock 11 tree sales centers and retail about 10,000 Christmas trees each season. Another 50,000 are wholesale marketed to retailers as far away as Massachusetts and Illinois.

The third and fourth generations of Strathmeyer tree growers were on hand to accept their York Ag Industry award. From left are Brian, Tim, Fred Sr., Robin, and Gerrit Strathmeyer.

Named York County Farm Family were the Huntsberger's of Corn Hill Farm. From left are, Rosemary and Geary, Robert and Sue.

Fred Sr. was instrumental in organizing the state Christmas Tree Growers Association. He is past president and a current director of the National Christmas Tree Growers Association.

All five children of the fourth generation of Strathmeyers are involved in the family business. Fred, Jr., and Gerrit handle marketing and sales, Tim and Brian manage production and daughter Robin works with the mail order division.

Also honored during the awards presentations were participants in numerous farm public relations efforts cooperatively sponsored by York agriculture

Penn State Dairy Science Club Holds Jubilee

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Bright sun and warm temperatures marked the Penn State Dairy Science Club's annual Dairy Jubilee on September 16.

Before scheduled activities began, 20 children from a State College daycare center and 12 children from the Easter Seals program enjoyed a presentation about Geraldine the cow by Marel Raub, 1994-95 Penn State Dairy Princess. After being treated to ice cream, the children helped feed two young calves from the Penn State herd.

At 11:00 a.m., club members began dipping free ice cream to the crowd. Thanks to donations from local grocery stores, the club also offered a sundae topping bar. Forty-five gallons of ice cream were dished up for over 800 people in only an hour and a half!

Five Penn State fraternities competed in a milk-chugging contest, vying for the coveted traveling milk can, which was donated by Richard Schlegel. After heated competition, Alpha Zeta won by .5 seconds over runner-up, Phi Mu Delta. Jay Brehm won the cow-calling contest, which was judged by a local disc jockey and Centre County Dairy Princess Rachel Tanis.

The Dairy Jubilee is an annual event held to promote the use of dairy products to Penn State students and faculty and to promote a positive image for Penn State's Dairy Science Club and Pennsylvania dairy farmers.

The event was broadcast live on two television stations.

The Dairy Club especially thanks the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program which helped sponsor the event and to Erin Goss, Mifflin County Dairy Princess and Haley Sankey, Clearfield County Dairy Princess for their participation.

Proper Fertility Depends On Amount, Time

WESTMINSTER, Md. — Proper nitrogen fertility depends upon the amount and time of application. If too little or too much nitrogen is applied, or if it is applied at the wrong time, many pest problems are made worse.

However, many weed and disease problems are minimized greatly when proper applications are made. Nitrogen is important for a dense lawn that resists weed encroachment and recovers rapidly from wear from your feet.

What effect does nitrogen have on the groundwater that goes into your well and potentially the bay? The potential for ground water pollution exists only where high rates of soluble nitrogen are applied to sandy soils having a high water table.

The proper timing and amounts of fertilizer are important to avoid pollution.

Late-season nitrogen fertilization schedule for Carroll County, Md.:

•September—one pound of nitrogen per 1000 square feet

•October—one pound of nitrogen per 1000 square feet

•November—one pound of nitrogen per 1000 square feet

The following fertilizers will give one pound of nitrogen:

3.0 lbs. of ammonium nitrate (33.5 percent N); 2.2 lbs. of Urea (45 percent N);, 3.2 lbs. of IBDU (31 percent); 10 lbs. of 10-10-10; or 20 lbs. of 5-10-5.

Ayrshire Breeders' Meeting Reminder

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — In an attempt to generate comment and discussion by rank and file members of the Ayrshire Breeder's Association, the national organization has scheduled several forums at large shows and events across the country.

The purpose of the forums is to help the breed association develop its short- and long-term goals, as established through a consensus of opinion by breeders.

The association recently sent out a news release from its headquarters in Battleboro, Vt., reminding breeders of the forum scheduled to be held during the North American Livestock Exposition (NAILE), in St. Louis, Mo.

According to the news release, the forum is scheduled to be held from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m., Nov. 7, at the expo center grounds, with more specific details available at the site.

"We will discuss what was said during the open forum at World Dairy Expo in Madison," said Jim McConnell, president of ABA, in the statement.

"We will pose many of the same questions to these Ayrshire breeders (who attend NAILE): Where should the breed be in five years? In 10 years? What is the most important role of the association? How can more rapid genetic gains be achieved?"

According to McConnell, the forums are extremely important to Ayrshire breeders. "We are deciding where we want the Ayrshire breed to be, and the best people to do that are the breeders. I look foward to hearing all of their comments."

For more information, call the ABA at (802) 254-7460.

Get Involved, Bedford Farmers Told

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

IMLER (Bedford Co.) — Sam Hayes, 22 years a state representative, from Huntingdon, spoke on his recent trip to Poland at the fall meeting of the Bedford County Farmers' Association.

"Poland," Hayes said, "is further ahead in farming than other countries that were behind the Iron Curtain

"And, the reason is because many of the Polish people were able to hold on to their land and farm it themselves."

The results brought about a stark contrast between the individually owned land and the Polish state farms.

Hayes asked if anyone in the room farmed as much as 800 acres. Getting several hands, he then asked how many people worked that land.

"Five," was the answer, with others in a similar status being in agreement.

"In Poland," Hayes said, "An 800 acre state farm had 700 employees. Is it any wonder there was little unemployment behind the Iron Curtain?"

Polish farms today average 8.8 acres in size and technology is about 1935-40, by American comparison.

Hayes introduced two Polish exchange students presently staying with his own family who are in America studying Agriculture. "It will not take Poland long to catch up with our standards," Hayes feels. "The Polish people have a very strong religious and spiritual strength. They are willing to learn and to work hard."

Noting the importance of keeping on top of government regulations in regards to farming, Hayes quoted a Polish friend who said, "It is much easier to loose your freedom than it is to gain it back."

Naomi Sollenberger, local representative to the Ag in the Classroom project, reported on the excellence of this program. "We need more ag related subjects taught in the schools," she said. "I am going to share all of the information and materials I got with other teachers."

Harold Shaulis Jr., Farm Bureau, District Director, reported "Dairy prices are about as high as they are going to get so we must have better management practices."

Resolutions recently drafted at the state Farmers' Association meeting were discussed and voted upon under the direction of Vice President Fred Claycomb. All were accepted with the exception of having R.D. addresses remain the same when 911 becomes operational. Those in attendance felt this would be a detriment to the emergency teams needing more precise directions on locations.

- State regulations easily accepted included exemption for casual labor be set at $1,000 under Workmen's Compensation Law.
- Bicycle riders should be required to wear reflective clothing or lighted indicator for dawn or dusk riding.
- County Farm Bureaus should give their approval to personnel making decisions on deprivation permits in their individual counties.

Norman Sollenberger, chairman of the Governmental Relations Committee, said, "No longer should weather and animals be our number one concern. But rather, what is going on in Washington and Harrisburg. There are many special interest groups that want to dictate how we should farm; through environmental laws, regulations, wetland laws, farm subsidy laws, animal rights laws, water use laws, and tax reforms."

Sollenberger said Bedford County is fortunate to have representatives such as Rep. Dick Hess, Rep. Jerry Stern, and Sen. Robert Jubelirer who work hard to protect the farmer. "But they need help," he warned. "Get involved, write your representatives, keep yourself updated on new laws and regulations and speak up for agriculture!"

Ken Mowry, president of the Bedford County organization congratulated the group on having a total of more than 485 members. He also reported that total farm income in Bedford County amounted to fifty-nine million, three thousand, three hundred and thirty-seven dollars in 1993.

The meeting was held at the Imler Fire Hall. Numerous door prizes collected by Gerald Mowry were awarded at the conclusion of the meeting.

Corby Zeigler's Lamb Takes Overall Championship At Manheim

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — After almost five hours of sheep competition, the final round was a showdown between Travis Donough's grand champion non-selling market lamb and Corby Zeigler's grand champion selling market lamb.

"These are two of the finest sheep you will find in competition anywhere," said Chris Herr, judge for the event held at the Manheim Farm Show on Thursday evening.

In the end, Herr pointed to Zeigler's champion heavy weight as the supreme champion overall and said, "It stands up top anywhere in the state. It's finished correctly."

The audience broke into applause but cheering the loudest was Corby's 11-year-old brother Brandon, who had achieved the same title last year.

"I'm really happy for him. I don't care that he beat me at all," Brandon said of his younger brother's feat.

The two brothers are almost newcomers to the sheep scene, with Corby debuting last year at Manheim. The boys are the sons of Dean and Carole Zeigler of Lititz. They purchased the sheep from Jerry Skidgel of Oklahoma.

Corby said that although he sometimes called the champion lamb Bubba, he really didn't have a name.

"We found they grew too attached when we named them," his dad said.

Travis Donough, 14, is certainly no newcomer to the sheep circuit. He has clinched top titles in fairs across the county for years. Not only did he win the grand champion market lamb title and numerous other firsts in classes but also showed the grand champion steer and the reserve champion hog at the Manheim Farm Show.

This year's champion Suffolk Scarlett is a full sister to the reserve champions shown at Manheim in the past two years.

Travis's continual achievements in sheep competition is made a bit sweeter by the fact that all his sheep are home bred. Sheep breeders hold smug pride that is well deserved when they are able to take top titles when competiting against sheep purchased from out-of-state breeders.

Travis and his brother Ryan, who showed the champion heavy weight and the champion reserve non-selling champ, are the sons of Ed and LaRue Donough. They have 20 ewes on their Manheim farm that they use for breeding purposes. The sheep are conditioned by running through hurdles and walking a mile a day.

In the breeding sheep division, Peter Hoffines accomplished his goal — to win the overall champion breeding sheep title. In his last year of showing, the 19-year-old achieved the trophy by showing a Southdown ewe. Judge Herr described the Southdown as very long and thick over the top with tremendous loins.

Hoffines, the son of Robert and Linda Hoffines, raises about 20 Southdown and Hamps on the family's Marietta farm. Two younger sisters, Amy and Jill, will take up their brother's duties in the sheep showing circuit.

In showmanship competition, Jason Stoltzfus placed first in the senior division, Regina Landis, in the 12- to 14-year-old division, and Radell Peters, in the 8- to 11-year-old division.

All three have achieved showmanship honors in other shows around the county.

Travis Donough holds the champion non-selling market lamb while his family helps hold all the trophies he and his brother Ryan won in competition on Thursday night. Parents are Ed and LaRue and sister Joelynn.

In his last year of showing, Peter Hoffines captures the supreme breeding sheep title with his Southdown ewe. Judge Chris Herr of the Department of Agriculture recalled the days when he competed against many of the family members who show at Manheim. According to Herr, sheep competition is getting tougher as the sheep are improving.

Two buses brought 84 Canadian farmers to visit the Manheim Farm Show on Tuesday. Farmers on both sides of the border enjoyed the time together.

Jay Mylin leads a small group through the cattle barns.

Canadian Farmers Visit

These facts were all outlined by Earl Geib, president, when a much larger group of visitors (two tour busses with 84 adult passengers) came from a much greater distance (Western Ontario, Canada) for a Manheim Farm Show visit Tuesday afternoon.

John Stafford, from Wroxeter, Ontario, said the group included farm members and delegates from the 3,800 member Gay Lea Foods Co-operative. The cooperative markets the members' milk and did $189 million of product sales last year and is run by a nine member board of directors. Stafford is chairman of the board. Each share of stock that is sold in the cooperative must be approved by this board to insure that individuals or organizations that buy stock are within the dairy industry and do not want to take over the cooperative outside of agriculture.

David Hawthorn, a dairyman with 40 cows at home in the Kitchner area, said he did not see much difference in dairy farming here and at home. "Everyone is growing his own feed and trying to get as much milk as possible," Hawthorn said. "Except you fellows grow a better corn crop and get four cuttings of alfalfa while we get two (cuttings). We can't do that sort of thing."

Hawthorn explained that their milk marketing board set the price of their quotas around the demand for milk and the demand to buy or sell quotas. During the recent GATT talks the uncertainty caused quota prices to go down as much as $100. But now people are buying quotas again so the price has partly recovered.

However, Hawthorn did not see the quota system as much different than the base system used in the US. "It costs you to put on cows and produce extra milk to develop base just as quotas are a cost of doing business to us," Hawthorn said. "With a quota you have the right to ship that much milk, but you must ship that milk to keep your quota. Otherwise you lose it. You don't own the quota; you own the right to ship milk. You can sell quota, but you have no idea what it will be worth at the time in the future when you may want to sell it."

In addition, the the Manheim show, the Canadian tour visited Atlantic Breeders and Hanover Farms. They also were served several smorgasboard meals a day while they were in Lancaster County. But the real pleasure of the trip that was expressed was the rapport that was immediately built between Manheim farmers and Canadian farmers.

"We take a trip to get away from the cows," Hawthorn said. "But then as soon as possible we find a dairy farmer here and start to talk cows. I guess that is the way it is in any business when you really enjoy what your are doing."

Jackpot Steer Contest At Big E

W. SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — The 1994 Jackpot Steer Contest at The Big E took place in Mallary Arena Sunday evening, September 25. The jackpot for the contest came from money put into the pot by each of the contestants. The pot was then split with seventy percent going to the grand champion and the remaining thirty percent going to the reserve grand champion.

Steve Wiemer, a beef producer from South Dakota, placed the forty steers that entered the showring. The steers were divided by weight into lightweight, mediumweight and heavyweight groups of about equal numbers. The weights on the steers ranged from 900 pounds to 1,435 pounds.

The grand champion steer was a 1,325-pound crossbred shown by Robert Faber of Pittstown, N.J. Reserve champion steer was a 1,175-pound crossbred exhibited by David Newpher of Fleetwood, Pa.

Results of the Jackpot Steer Contest at The Big E are listed by class.

Mediumweight: 1 David Newpher, 2 Tiffany D Jespersen, 3 Andrew Rodgers

Heavyweight: 1 Robert Faber, 2 Katie Alward, 3 Nick Faber

EMM Holds 25th Anniversary

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — For 25 years, EMM Sales and Service, Inc., has been serving customers with feed truck units. The company management and employees celebrated their history with an open house at their headquarters in Rothsville last Saturday afternoon.

President Jack Conrad said the event was held to show appreciation for their customers over the years. Conrad started in business in 1969 and became a dealer for Walinga, Inc., in 1974. In 1976 the first bulk tank feed trucks were produced based on the market needs in this area.

Business has increaced each year and according to Walinga's anniversary newsletter (Walinga's 40th anniversary happened to be the same year as EMM's 25th anniversary.) EMM has been responsable for many "firsts" in the Walinga units and features. When customers had a need in the northeastern part of the USA, that need was turned into a unit to be manufactured by Walinga. Of the units produced from the years 1966 through 1993, EMM's activity contributed to 8.5 percent of the total unit numbers sold by Walinga.

Right now, production is sold out for five or six months. Three years ago, a new aluminan body was developed that has done well. EMM's related to agriculture through their customers who serve agriculture.

At the open house, special service awards were presented to two employees who have been with the company for the 25 years. They are Dick Houser and Dick Conrad. The company handles all sales on the east coast and has exported five units to Puerto Rico. A catered lunch and the awarding of door prizes was part of the day's activities.

The owners of EMM Sales and Service are Jack, right, and Diane Conrad, and son John. Their 25th business anniversary open house was held last Friday afternoon.

He has also judged sheep all over the East and consigned animals and supported numerous purebred livestock sales and has been chairman of the Pennsylvania Suffolk Ewe Sale for 31 years.

Also honored by the PLA were two FFA youth who were recognized for their outstanding achievements.

Scott Byers, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. Z. Lloyd Byers, of Liverpool, is a member of the Greenwood High School FFA and has projects including swine, beef, sheep and crop production. He has served as sentinel and parliamentarian of his chapter as well as chairman of his chapter's safety committee. He is also involved in various extra-curricular activies and at church.

From the left, Kathy Stewart presents Scott Byers with a plaque recognizing him as the male PLA youth award recipient.

Also honored, was Jenny Zerby, 18, who is also state FFA president. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nevin Zerby, of Beavertown and has been an FFA member at West Snyder High School since 1990. Her projects also include swine, beef and sheep.

President of the PLA, Tony Dobrosky, also welcomed those attending the opening ceremonies and gave an overview of the supporting acitivities which help make the KILE possible. He said he urged people to support KILE by supporting such PLA activities such as the annual rib-cook-off, because proceeds raised go to support KILE.

Following the presentations, Bruce Rappaport gave a slide presentation on the importance of horses to Pennsylvania and to KILE.

The KILE continues each day through Monday evening with thousands of animals and shows and sales daily. There are family oriented acitivities and children-participation events held also, in addition to strolling entertainment and a trained dog show.

Mifflin County Farm Bureau Holds Annual Meeting

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

McVEYTOWN (Mifflin Co.) — It may take time, but members of the Mifflin County Farmers' Association will be getting used to saying a new name—Mifflin County Farm Bureau (MCFB).

Members voted unanimously for the name change at their annual meeting held at the McVeytown Fire Hall. According to Member Relations Director Elrose Glick, bylaw revisions were last conducted in August of 1981, and before that in 1978 and 1969. The purpose of the name change is to align more closely to parent organizations Pennsylvania Farm Bureau and American Farm Bureau.

President Stan Dunk opened the meeting by introducing Carrie Stufft, a third grade teacher at East Derry Elementary School in Lewistown. Stufft attended Ag in the Classroom at Penn State this summer and told members how much she appreciated their sponsorship.

"In July, 99 teachers attended Ag in the Classroom. It was the first time some teachers were sponsored by their own school district," Stufft said, adding that her own school has enough money saved to sponsor a teacher next year. Stufft believes in the purpose of Ag in the Classroom so much, she is returning in 1995 as a presenter. Her video then explained what Ag in the Classroom is all about.

Conducted by the Pennsylvania Foundation for Better Living, Ag in the Classroom was designed to help teachers integrate agriculture into their curriculum through activity ideas, lesson plans, resources, and materials. Most children and parents today are 2-3 generations removed from agriculture and simply do not know how much agriculture touches their lives through food and clothing.

Through Ag in the Classroom, teachers learn how to incorporate agricultural concepts into the classroom curriculum without administrative hassles. For example, the video suggested teaching a language lesson with an agricultural theme or teaching science through hydroponic gardening in the classroom, compost and mushroom gardening or sprouting seeds. Most of the hands-on activities are agriculturally and environmentally based and will develop an awareness for school-aged children to learn and pass on to their children. As one person on the tape said, "Give a man a fish and it's gone. Teach him how to fish...". It's teaching an agricultural awareness for future generations.

Stufft is married to veterinarians Dr. Grant Stufft and conducts children's activities for Kids Day at the Mifflin County Youth Fair and during Farm/City week.

State Director Wayne Freaman talked about two of the most important activities of Farm Bureau—the policy development process and electing officers.

Freaman said Pennsylvania reached an all time membership high with more than 26,000 members and more than 4,700 new members. He presented Dunk with a Member Services Co-op Advertising check. Ken Loht received a membership award from Freaman for signing up 25 new members on behalf of Pennsylvania Farm Bureau. Only six other people statewide received such an award.

In the election for directors, George Goss was elected to represent Decatur Township, Allen Fultz, Armagh Township, Jeff White, Brown Township, and Duane Gearhart, Wayne Township.

State Advisory Council President Beth Laughlin announced the formation of a new Mifflin County advisory council led by Victor and Carolyn Yoder of Belleville.

Governmental Relations Director Mark Ellinger commented on the latest legislative activities statewide and nationally. "The issue of private property rights is getting bigger all the time," Ellinger concluded.

Member Services Director Dave Esh outlined several services for members including insurance coverage with farm agent Bob Smith, 50% off travel hotel rates, and updated manuals on worker's protection program.

Member Relations Director Elrose Glick presented awards to Joe and Beth Laughlin for their advisory council activities, Gloria Goss for volunteering as Ag in the Classroom coordinator, Ken Loht for his continuous activities as membership chairman and for making gain this year, and Gail Strock for filling the role of County Information Director and Newsletter Editor.

Policy Development Chairman Dave Stuck presented four policies for discussion and adoption. In the end, the group adopted three more policies presented from the floor, voting on topics such as Workman's Compensation, selenium levels in animal feeds, AG Statistics Report, public relations, BST in marketed dairy cows, disposal or recycling of used tires, and the State Bottle Bill.

Regional Organization Director Joe Buck presented awards to Governmental Relations Director Mark Ellinger, Membership Chairman Ken Loht, and CID/-CNE Gail Strock.

The following evening in a reorganizational meeting, the board of directors re-elected Stan Dunk as President, Dave Stuck as Vice President, Janice White as Secretary, and Pauling Glick as Treasurer.

Elected to serve as Armagh Township's director was Allen Fultz, left; and re-elected into office for the Mifflin County Farm Bureau was Pauline Glick as Treasurer; Stan Dunk as president; and Dave Stuck as vice president. Janice White was re-elected as

Reproductive Management Tools Can Save

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — New reproductive management techniques can save dairy farmers time while improving their bottom line, according to an expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"To give milk, cows need to give birth," said Dr. Michael O'Connor, professor of dairy science. "Cows should calve regularly so they spend more time in the most productive phase of lactation."

A calving interval of 12.5 to 12.8 months is most profitable. "If a herd has a calving interval of 13.5 months instead of 12.5 months, the potential loss in milk production is $35 to $45 per cow per year," O'Connor said. "Unfortunately, many farmers don't pay enough attention to reproductive management."

For instance, a recent Penn State survey of Pennsylvania dairy producers found that only 41 percent consistently devote specific times twice daily for heat detection. "Many producers think it's a waste of time to watch their cows for 20 minutes twice a day," O'Connor said.

"But ignoring heat detection reduces the herd's reproductive performance, which costs the producer money. It's a catch-22. Farmers may not pay directly out of their wallets if they skip heat detection, but they'll lose potential profits to extended calving intervals."

Programmed or controlled breeding systems that use prostaglandin to synchronize estrus in groups of lactating cows may be the answer for producers short on time.

"Estrous synchronization systems can limit heat detection to certain days of the week when treated cows are likely to exhibit standing and mounting behavior," O'Connor said. "Estrus also may be easier to detect, since these behaviors increase when several cows are in estrus together."

Tom Ridge will take an axe to DER

Guess who's copying his master plan.

Tom Ridge, Republican candidate for governor, promises rural voters a new DER that will be "a partner of farmers rather than prosecutor".

Tom Ridge, Republican candidate for governor, has been hammering at DER's gross mismanagement and bully boy tactics since June 18, 1993 when he originally announced plans to revamp DER.

First and foremost, said Ridge at the time, is the need to split DER into two smaller, more responsive departments.

So guess who stole a page out of the Ridge master plan at this late date? You got it. His opponent, Mark Singel.

The Lieutenant Governor also wants to break up DER, he told farm reporters at Ag Progress Days. But Singel didn't seem to have the first clue on the how or where. Not even after 14 months of studying the Ridge proposals.

As Singel explained it to the farm press, "We are taking a look at moving the (resource) development aspects (of DER) into different realm, whether into the Department of Agriculture, the Department of Commerce or somewhere else, remains to be seen". His old pal Bill Clinton couldn't have said it better.

Tom Ridge has no such doubts about overhauling DER. Never did. Here's the time table for his first week as governor:

Speed up permits. On day one as governor Ridge will issue an executive order to turbo-charge the DER permit process. "We shouldn't make farmers wait months before using their land," Ridge says.

Seek farmer advice. Ridge also will order DER to involve farmers and others in decision making before regulations are written. Result: fairer, more workable regs.

Downsize DER. During week one, Governor Ridge will work closely with legislative leaders to split DER into two departments. One to handle environmental protection, the other to oversee state parks and forests.

"We can protect the environment without crippling the farmer's ability to compete," Ridge insists.

Count on it.

Dairy-MAP Workshops Planned

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (Farm Bureau) has joined Penn State Cooperative Extension, Pennsylvania Farm Credit Associations, the Pennsylvania Holstein Association and Midstate Bank in promoting an upcoming series of management workshops for dairymen.

"The Pennsylvania dairy industry must position itself for the future in order to remain a major dairy state," said Harold Shaulis, Jr., chairman of Farm Bureau's Dairy Advisory Committee. "Since milk prices have not kept pace with inflation, individual milk producers must place more emphasis on achieving profitability through increased production efficiency in order to survive in the years ahead."

A "Management and Profitability" program called Dairy-MAP has been developed by the Penn State Cooperative Extension Service and the Pennsylvania dairy industry to help dairymen sharpen their management skills. The information is provided during eight hours of workshop sessions over a two-day period. Group participation and interaction rather than lectures are used as the vehicles for education. About 400 dairymen, including Shaulis, enrolled in the Dairy-MAP program as it was made available on a pilot program basis during the last few years. Now the program has been "fine tuned" and is being readied for statewide availability starting next January.

"Dairy-MAP workshops really drive home the message—good management is essential for successful farming," said Shaulis, Debbie Moose of Mercer, another dairy farmer who has also attended the workshops, said, "I got motivated to set goals, make lists, prioritize activities. Dairy-MAP showed me how not to get bogged down in the trivial stuff."

Starting in October, the Dairy-MAP Promotion Committee named above will be conducting meetings to explain the Dairy-MAP program to agribusinesses around the state and will be asking for their support. "A healthy dairy industry is vital to the economy of the state and its agribusinesses," said Shaulis. "It's important to have an educational program for dairymen which focuses on successful management of the farm business for profit and long term personal satisfaction. We're urging every business interested in making their future better to help us prepare for ours by supporting the Dairy-MAP program. Agribusinesses are being urged to attend the meeting being sponsored in their locale."

Recipes, Thrifty Hints, Pa. Dutch Lore Make Up Unique 400-Page Shartlesville Cookbook

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

SHARTLESVILLE (Berks Co.) — Not only is "The Shartlesville PA Community Cookbook" loaded with scrumptious recipes but also tales about the early settlers of northern Berks County and the foods they preserved.

Karen Kinnane, who edited the 400-page cookbook, described it as a collection of authentic, Pennsylvania Dutch "receipts," modern recipes, thrifty hints and Pennsylvania Dutch lore.

Read about the cloth feed sacks that were used as fabric for dresses, underwear, pillowcases, quilts and other household uses during the late 1800s and early 1900s. The book takes readers through the cycles of planting and harvesting. An excerpt from the book reads: As the weather cooled the preserving, pickling, drying and canning continued. Field corn was gathered. Just before the first killing frost, the last of the tender garden vegetables were picked. Green tomatoes were sorted. Those slightly pink or yellow were wrapped individually in paper and placed in a cool, dark spot to ripen slowly. These might last until October. Hard green tomatoes were fried, made into mock apple pie, mincemeat and sour pickles. Corn relish, chow chow, picalilli, rummage relish, dill, bread and butter pickles, and other "sweets and sours" were made from the last fresh vegetables.

October meant the harvest of pumpkins, gourds, and winter squash. Cold weather crops were stored in the root cellar (called the arch). Straw was layered over root crops like carrots and parsnips in the garden were dug when needed.

Perhaps the most unusual feature of this cookbook is the 56-page chapter called "A Year of Pennsylvania Dutch Cooking," which includes recipes for the food that was available during the changing seasons. The original Pennsylvania Dutch name is given with the English name. These include Rivla Suppe (Rivel Soup), Pissabet Sidaschpeck (Dandelion With Bacon Dressing), Kase Boi (Cheese Pie), Grusselberrg Jelly (Gooseberry Jam), and many more.

Many of these recipes in this chapter date back to 1765, when the village was settled by mostly Pennsylvania Dutch. During this era, the settlers ate what they hunted or fished and the produce they grew, dried, and canned.

Some cooks will want to try these authentic recipes, but others will prefer more up-to-date recipes, which are less time consuming in preparation.

The book has an abundant supply of recipes under the following chapters: appetizers, beverages, breads, soups, salads, casseroles, sauces, main dishes, fish, poultry, vegetables, "seven sweets and seven sours", cakes and frostings, cookies, pies, desserts, and more.

There is a whole chapter on preparing gifts from country kitchens, another on how-to's that includes instructions for such items as soap, tallow candles, crochet stiff starch, and many more.

"This cookbook is for thrifty folks," Kinnane said. A chapter on "Waste Not, Want Not," features recipes using leftovers and ideas to conserve food dollars.

Profits from The Shartlesville Community Cookbook will benefit the Shartlesville Community Fire Company and the restoration of Shartlesville's Painted Ladies, Victorian buildings sporting bright, multi-colored paint to enhance unique architecture and elaborate "wooden lace" trim.

The cookbook costs $16.95, available at several businesses in Shartlesville. Copies may be purchased by mail for $20.95. Send name and full address with check made out to K. Kinnane, P.O. Box 212, Shartlesville, PA 19554.

Here is a smattering of recipes from the cookbook.

TOMATO SPICE CAKE

1 package 2-layer spice cake mix
1 can condensed tomato soup
½ cup water
2 eggs
1 cup chopped nuts

Beat together cake mix, soup, water, and eggs. Fold in one cup nuts. Bake as directed. Frost with your favorite white frosting.

Fruit Cake: After mixing, fold in 1 cup chopped, candied fruit and 1 cup chopped walnuts. Bake as directed on package, adding about 5 minutes more.

TURKEY MINESTRONE SOUP

1 meaty turkey carcass, cut apart
1 tablespoon instant chicken bouillon granules
1 bay leaf
2 cups shredded cabbage
14½-ounces stewed tomatoes, cut up
15-ounces Great Northern beans, drained
15-ounces canned corn, drained
1 large onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
¼ cup snipped parsley
1 teaspoon dried basil, crushed

Combine turkey, bouillon, bay leaf, and 7 cups water. Bring to boiling. Reduce heat; cover and simmer one hour. Remove turkey carcass. When cool, remove meat from bones and chop. Discard bones. Strain broth; return broth and chopped turkey to Dutch oven. Stir in cabbage, undrained tomatoes, beans, onion, garlic, parsley and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Bring to boiling. Reduce heat; cover and simmer 25 to 30 minutes. Serves 6.

1 cup sugar
1½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
1 cup cranberries, coarsely chopped
¼ cup shortening
¾ cup orange juice
1 tablespoon grated orange rind
1 egg, well beaten
½ cup chopped nuts

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder, salt, and baking soda. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse oatmeal. Combine orange juice and grated rind with egg. Pour all at once into dry ingredients, mixing just enough to dampen. Carefully fold in choppped nuts and cranberries. Spoon into greased loaf pan. Spread corners and sides slightly higher than center. Bake at 350 degrees for one hour until crust is golden brown. Cool.

1 cup seasoned bread crumbs
3 tablespoons olive oil
6 slices mozzarella cheese
1 pint heavy cream or evaporated milk
1 cup parmesan cheese, grated
2 tablespoons parsley, chopped
Pepper

Remove from pan and place in a greased 9x13-inch baking dish, topping each breast with a slice of mozzarella cheese. Mix together remaining ingredients in a saucepan and cook until mixture gets hot and thickens. Pour over chicken and bake in 350 degree oven for 25 minutes. Great served over pasta. Yield: 6 servings.

May be made ahead of time and refrigerated. Bake 30 minutes before serving.

FRIED GREEN TOMATOES

GLAZED HAM LOAF

Loaf:

1 small onion, chopped fine

Glaze:
½ cup vinegar
¼ cup water

BOOVA SHENKEL
Boy's Legs

3 pounds stewing beef
Salt and pepper
12 medium-sized potatoes
3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons minced parsley
1 small onion, minced
3 eggs
2½ cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons fat
7 or 8 tablespoons cold water
3 tablespoons butter or bacon drippings
1 cup diced dry bread
½ cup milk

Wipe meat with a damp cloth; cover with water. Add seasonings to taste and cook slowly for 2½ to 3 hours. Wash potatoes; peel and cut into thin slices, then cook until tender. Drain; add butter, salt and pepper to taste, parsley and onion. Mix well. Beat eggs; add to potatoes and beat mixture lightly. Let stand until pastry is made. Sift together flour, baking powder, and salt. Cut in the shortening with two knives or a pastry blender; add water, using only enough to hold dough together. Roll thin on a floured board and cut into large circles, about 10-inches in diameter. Spread with some of the potato mixture. Fold dough to form a semi-circle, pressing edges together with prongs of fork. Place on top of the hot meat and broth. Cover pot closely and boil about 25 minutes. While these are cooking, make a sauce of butter or bacon drippings; add bread cubes and brown. Stir in milk. Arrange the Boova Shenkel on a platter and pour over all the milk sauce. Serve at once. Serves 8 to 10.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Our in-house sundial says that the golden season has begun.,

Orientation of our farmhouse windows to the compass points is such that at only certain times of the year does the early-morning sunshine wash across the breakfast table. In Springtime, the flood of light into the kitchen-dining area ushers in the green-up season, as grass stretches upward, buds push out, and life renews all around us.

But the bright sunshine of October mornings, poking inquisitive fingers into dark corners of the house, signals an opposite message.

The flush of golden color pouring through the southeastern-facing panes of glass is a cover-up for the chill lurking just beyond the screens. Hints of frostiness nip at the fingers as I push open the back door to let the cat inside, and swirl in with her in that brief moment when the door is opened just a few inches to let her slip through.

As the warm, yellow light brightens into broad, clear day, another kind of gold now commands center stage on the farm.

Corn. For both forage and grain, corn is king of the fall harvest season. And blessed with bounteous weather around most of the countryside, local corn growers are - pardon the pun - up to their ears in golden kernels this year.

From the office desk, I mark the progress of the harvest season by the welcome roaring sounds of equipment doing its thing - or the uncomfortable silence of breakdown. Too much quiet stirs the sinking feeling in the pit of the stomach, wondering what broke, how long it will take to fix....and what the repairs might cost.

Regular passes of tractors pulling loaded forage wagons are almost immediately followed by a loud roar as the silage blower is stated up. An occasional thunk in the steady hum telltales a clump of lump bumping the metal pipe carrying the finely-chopped stalks and ears that steadily pile up inside the silos' walls.

High-energy corn silage itself is golden as it arrives fresh out of the field, ideally with an abundance of yellow kernels coloring the greenish-brown chopped bits of stalks and leaves. It never ceases to intrigue me how, despite the blending of kernels through the chopped stalk portion, cows (especially certain ones) can root through the stuff with those big, broad muzzles and nibble out the grain from the stalk part.

Glancing out to check progress of the outside operations, other golden changes taking place are readily apparent.

Mulberry trees in the fencerow below the house are beginning to fade from deep green to a yellowish-hued shade. A stalk of poison ivy on the backyard bank, on that escaped a mid-season attack from my garden sprayer, is going golden from the ground up, leaf by leaf. And the late soybean plantings have finally developed yellowing sections, signalling maturity of the stalks with their many pods of tiny, round beans.

Meanwhile, The Farmer reports another harvest well underway. With each trip he makes on the road through the small woodlot between fields, he has spied a squirrel scurrying along the packed-dirt passage. And each time, the squirrel has been lugging along a hickory nut, the thick outer shell still intact.

It reemphasizes what we've always known: the hectic pace of the golden harvest season does tend to make farm life just a little nuttier that usual.

For squirrels and farmers alike.

Manheim Farm Show Queen Is Tracy Bollinger

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — One minute Tracy Bollinger, dressed in blue jeans and a sweatshirt, was showing hogs at the Manheim Farm Show, and the next minute, she was dressed in a stylish navy blue suit being crowned Manheim Farm Show Queen.

This fast switch was easily accomplished by Tracy who is accustomed to working hard and quickly to get everything done. She has been showing hogs and sheep at local county fairs for many years.

The 17-year-old daughter of Eugene and Carol Bollinger of Manheim, placed third in the hog showmanship class and had two first placings in the market hog classes on Monday night when the coronation was held.

Readers may remember that Tracy needed to have her sister Amy show her sheep at the New Holland Fair last week while she was interviewed by judges in preparation for the coronation this week.

Tracy did not know that she had won the coronation until Monday night's coronation.

She needed to prepare a speech on "What Farm Show Means to Me," and answer in impromptu question before the crowd. Here is a brief version of her speech.

F un at the fair.
A nticipation and excitment in seeing who wins.
R esponsibility is great but it pays off in the end.
M erit depends not on winning or losing but on gaining a new friend.
S leepy after staying up two nights past 12 o'clock.
H eartbroken when I sold my first steer that helped me win showmanship.
O nlooker spectators cheering us on and showing interest in ag.
W ork to get things running.

Tracy Bollinger generally is dressed in blue jeans and sweat shirt to show hogs and sheep at many local fairs. But on Monday night, she was all dressed up and crowned Manheim Farm Show Queen. Shown with her is escort Ryan Zimmerman from Manheim. To win the title, Tracy was interviewed by four judges. She gave a prepared speech on "What Manheim Farm Show Means to Me," and answered an impromptu question before the crowd gathered for the coronation.

It's a Small World

Since 1994 is International Year of the Family, I've been thinking globally all year long. But recently, I was reminded just how small the world really is. My husband has been traveling to Middle Eastern countries. I've been working with Latinos here in the Lehigh Valley. And over the weekend we visited with friends who have returned from Turkey. It seems each day I make a connection with another country or culture.

Even in rural areas, families are experiencing out global society. My husband proudly brought me a gift from his latest business trip—Mango Tang® We both love mangoes, and he wanted to show me how Tang® took on an international flair—instead of orange Tang®, they drink Mango-flavored beverages. Well, the funny global joke was, that although the labeling was printed in Arabic, the production line proudly stated, "Made in White Plains, New York." It is a small, funny world.

In the future families will build even more cross-cultural connections. You can help your children and grandchildren feel confident and comfortable in these situations by the actions you take. Sometimes I find myself stumbling for a response when a child asks a question about someone else. These moments can be awkward for any adult.

Clyde Ford, author of We Can All Get Along, stresses the importance of discussing ethnic differences with children. "Children are fascinated with their bodies and the bodies of others. They are naturally attracted by people with different skin color, hair texture, and other different physical characteristics." Our response can teach them either to be comfortable with differences or to fear them.

For example, what is an appropriate response to a child's, "Why does Miyoko speak funny?" Instead of responding, "Miyoko can't help how she speaks. Let's not say anything.", try "Miyoko doesn't speak funny. She speaks differently than you do. She speaks Japanese because that's what her mom and dad speak. It is okay to ask questions about what Miyoko is saying, but it is not okay to say that her speech sounds funny because that can hurt her feelings."

Or how would you respond to a child's query, "Why is Jamal's skin so dark?" Rather than avoiding the issue by saying, "His skin color doesn't matter. We are all the same underneath.", briefly explain that Jamal's skin is dark because his mom and dad have dark brown skin. "There is a special chemical in our skin called melanin. If you have a lot of melanin, your skin is dark. If you only have a little, your skin is light."

If you are from a community that has very little ethnic diversity, read books to your children that tell of different cultures. Also discuss the topic in advance of a visit to Washington, D.C., Philadelphia, or New York City. When exchange students visit your school, get to know them. Take advantage of cultural festivals in your area. The Lehigh Valley, where I live is rich with these festivals—Highland Games, Puerto Rican Fairs, Slavak Celebrations. I am richer because of the friendships I have with my Sicilian, Puerto Rican, Pennsylvania Dutch, and Chinese neighbors. Research shows that the more experiences we have with people of different cultures, the more likely we are to view these individuals positively. In small, everyday ways, you can become more comfortable and help your family to be more comfortable in a diverse community.

Having the ability to work together, to understand each other will not be found ready made. It takes time to create these skills. Yet these skills are critical for many people in their jobs and as they interact in their neighborhoods. You can be a part of the process as you spend time with your family and friends around the dinner table, at your placed of worship, in schools, and at the playground.

Poultry For Dinner

Any meal can become a special occasion with these poultry dishes.

Today's chicken and turkey are available in a variety of forms to minimize preparation time and add creativity to your menu.

Poultry is economical, too. Because chicken is naturally low in fat content and calories, even those with special diets enjoy chicken.

There's no end to the different ways poultry can be served. Here are recipes you are sure to enjoy.

CHICKEN POT PIE

Ready-to- use refrigerated biscuits top this main dish.

1 can cream of broccoli soup
1 can creamy chicken mushroom soup
1 cup milk
¼ teaspoon thyme leaves, crushed
¼ teaspoon pepper
4 cups cooked vegetables (broccoli, cauliflower, carrots, and potato)
2½ cups cubed cooked chicken
1 package refrigerated biscuits

In 3-quart oblong baking dish, combine soup, milk, thyme, and pepper. Stir in vegetables and chicken. Bake at 400 degrees for 15 minutes or until mixture begins to bubble. Stir.

Meanwhile, cut biscuits into quarters, cutting almost but not all the way through the bottom. Remove dish from oven and stir.

Arrange biscuits over hot chicken mixture. Bake 15 minutes more or until biscuits are golden brown.

8 small whole white carrots

In 4-quart Dutch oven over medium heat, brown chicken for 10 minutes in hot oil. Remove chicken, set aside. Spoon off fat.

Add next five ingredients. Return chicken to Dutch oven. Heat to boiling. Reduce heat to low. Cover and simmer 15 minutes. Add carrots and onions. Simmer 20 minutes or until chicken is tender. Serve with hot cooked white potatoes.

Is it a sweet potato or a yam?

According to the Louisiana Sweet Potato Commission, there are no true yams produced for food in the U.S. The yam, which is a common food in some parts of the world, is an entirely different plant than the sweet potato.

Today the word yam is used as a sort of trademark among produce wholesalers and retailers to identify sweet potatoes that are soft and moist and sweet when cooked with flesh that is a deep orange in color.

This is the season to use sweet potatoes or yams.

When you buy sweet potatoes, choose firm, well-shaped potatoes with bright, clean, and smooth skin.

YAM CANDY

2 cups sugar
½ cup evaporated milk
¼ cup butter
1 cup chopped pecans
½ cup cooked, mashed yams
½ teaspoon vanilla
3 tablespoons marshmallow cream

Bring sugar, milk, and butter to a boil for 2 to 3 minutes; add pecans and yams. Cook until it starts to sugar. Remove from heat; add vanilla and marshmallow cream. Beat until candly loses gloss. Pour into buttered dish. Cut into squares. Makes approximately 42 small pieces.

Consuming Thoughts

Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.

Chestnuts roasting on an open fire brings visions of a warm comfortable home with family gathered to enjoy one of the specialty fall products—the chestnut. But in order for your dream to become a reality you need to harvest and store the nuts correctly to avoid spoilage.

Fresh chestnuts contain 40 to 45 percent carbohydrate, 5 percent oil and about 50 percent moisture. It is the moisture that makes them so perishable. Chestnut spoilage is almost always due to mold. There are four ways to prevent mold from developing. The mold organisms must be destroyed by heat, or the moisture content of the nutmeats must be 10 percent or lower, the relative humidity of the storage area must be 70 percent or lower, or the storage temperature must be 32° or lower.

To destroy the mold on chestnuts, treat the nuts in a warm water bath (125°F) for one hour. A cooking temperature lower than 125°F will not kill the mold organisms. A higher temperature will damage the nuts. The nuts may then be stored in perforated polyethylene bags for two months at 40°F.

You can prevent spoilage by proper drying, too. To dry the nuts, place them in mesh bags and hold them at 40°F for four days in an area that has well-circulated dry air, or dry them in food dryers for 4-8 hours at 110°F. This reduces the nuts' moisture content to 10 percent; dried nuts can be held for more than a year in a cool, dry area. Nuts dried this way must be moistened by soaking or steaming for about 30 minutes before use.

You can store freshly harvested chestnuts at 34°F without any preparation, too. Chestnuts are at an optimum temperature and moisture content at this temperature. You can freeze only the hot water "blanched" chestnuts and the dried chestnuts. Those that are only stored at 34°F will be injured by freezing.

Keep chestnuts dry on the surface at all times to prevent slime and recontamination with mold. Storage at 40°F or lower is essential in preventing insect infestation, also. Stored in a cool, dry place or in the refrigerator, the nuts will stay fresh for a month or more.

To roast chestnuts in the shell—Slash through the shells on the flat side of the nuts. Place chestnuts, cut sides up, on a baking sheet. Roast at 400°F (hot oven) until tender—about 20 minutes. Insert fork through cut in shell to test tenderness.

To blanch chestnuts—put them in boiling water and let stand 2 minutes. Remove a few at a time, cool slightly, then peel with a paring knife. If nuts are difficult to peel, return them to the hot water for a minute or two. Roasting also will loosen the skins of chestnuts. Remove shells and skins while nuts are warm.

Cooked nuts should be covered and refrigerated and will keep three or four days.

There are 30 to 40 chestnuts to a pound, and a pound yields about 2 1/2 cups of nutmeats.

Chestnuts are low in calories—for a nut. One ounce of shelled chestnuts contain 55 calories. This is because they have relatively little fat—4 percent or 5 percent, compared to 71 percent for pecans, for instance.

Milk's New Campaign

COLUMBUS, Ohio. — The dairy industry has a new attitude and a unique look in its newest fluid milk advertising campaigning. The ads send milk lovers on "milk missions," urging consumers to go to their refrigerators for the great taste of ice cold milk.

"Milk. Help Yourself" is a $48 million national marketing campaign focusing on the pleasure and satisfaction milk lovers receive when they drink milk.

"The new campaign represents a shift in direction for the entire milk industry," says Scott Higgins, general manager of Mid East United Dairy Industry Association (Mid East UDIA). "We build on the equity of the health related themes of past campaigns, but the new approach addresses the reason people drink milk—enjoyment.

Mid East UDIA kicked off the debut of the new fluid milk advertising by delivering ice cold milk and breakfast muffins to radio disc jockeys. Dairy and Nutrition Council Mid East nutrition education consultants visited radio personalities in 20 major metropolitan markets in Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, prompting them to talk about the great taste of milk on th air which further extends the campaign message. Milk, cookies and brownies were included with the radio deliveries as an afternoon snack.

Mid East UDIA also mailed 350 press kits to advertising and food media. This kit contained information focusing on the flavor and quality of ice cold milk.

In addition, a video news release was promoted to local ABC, NBC and CBS television affiliates for broadcast news. The report focused on the development of the new milk ads and the creative thinking behind the theme, "Milk. Help Yourself."

The American Dairy Association Mid East, the marketing arm of Mid East UDIA, is supporting the new fluid milk advertising by working with regional processors. Processors are encouraged to utilize "Milk. Help Yourself." on milk packaging, milk haulers and delivery vehicles which will compliment and extend the overall advertising campaign.

The new fluid milk advertisements depict a refreshing, ice cold glass of milk as the ideal accompaniment to enticing food choices such as freshly baked chocolate chip cookies. According to a national survey administered by the National Family Opinion, nearly half of those questioned (41 percent) listed chocolate chip cookies as their favorite snack to enjoy with a glass of milk. A bowl of cereal (21 percent) and peanut butter and jelly sandwiches (13 percent) ranked second and third respectively.

This is the first combined advertising effort of the newly formed Dairy Management Incorporated, a joint venture between the United Dairy Industry association and the National Dairy Promotion and Research Board. This joint effort has allowed for a stronger advertising campaign, resulting in more frequency an cost efficiency.

Mid East UDIA is one of 19 state and regional member organizations of Dairy Management Incorporated that implements advertising, marketing, promotion and nutrition education on behalf of dairy farmers in Ohio, West Virginia; western Pennsylvania and northern Kentucky.

ANSWER — D.J. Long wanted recipes for canned soups such as cream of mushroom, cream of celery, cream of chicken, and tomato to can in her pressure canner. Thanks to Hazel Spamer, Perry Hall, for answering. Hazel expresses our thoughts completely when she writes that many of the questions in this column could be answered by calling an extension agent, but the column would not be nearly as interesting. She writes, "Us oldtimers (I've been cooking and canning in my own kitchen for 51 years and learned a lot at my mother's knee) get a chuckle over some of these questions.

Recently Hazel (who is 70 years old and great grandmother of three boys) canned 15 quarts of Italian prune plum jam, tomatoes, pepper relish, and snap beans. About 50 to 75 jars of tomatoes were canned in pint and half pint jars. Although she was supposed to be bedfast, she could not let the vegetables go to waste. Will, her husband, is bringing in lima beans, both pole and bush, okra, zinnias, etc. Corn is finished. Her health problem is currently cleared up but she needs to be careful. Here is her recipe. Although she hasn't canned it, directions for canning cream soups in a pressure canner should be adaptable.

Cream Of Mushroom Soup

1 pound mushrooms
¼ cup butter
1 medium-sized onion, chopped
1½ tablespoon flour
6 cups milk
1 bay leaf
4 sprigs parsley
1 whole clove
Salt and pepper
Dash cayenne
Dash mace
½ cup heavy cream
2 egg yolks, well beaten

Prepare mushrooms and put through a food chopper. Melt the butter in the top of a double boiler, add the chopped onion and mushrooms. Cook for 5 minutes over direct heat, stirring constantly. Sprinkle in the flour, blend well. Scald the milk with the bay leaf, parsley and clove. Strain. Gradually stir the scalded milk into the mushroom mixture and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture boils and thickens. Season to taste with salt, pepper, cayenne, and mace. Place the top of the boiler over boiling water and let simmer 20 minutes, stirring frequently. Rub through a fine meshed wire sieve into another saucepan. Return to stove, scald the cream and stir in the egg yolks. Add to the soup mixture, stir thoroughly, reheat, do not boil again.

ANSWER — J. Sensenig, Mohnton, wanted to know if the striped cushaw pumpkin can be used for both canning and baking. Also, is the inside texture fine or coarse? Thanks to an Easton reader who wrote that cushaw pumpkin has a fine texture that makes excellent light-colored pies. In fact, the reader wrote, that cushaw pumpkin is the only one she uses for pie because it makes the best.

ANSWER — D. Newsom, Cooperstown, N.Y., wanted a recipe for Queen Anne's Lace Jelly. Thanks to Karen Kinnane for sending a recipe from the Shartlesville Community Cookbook.

Queen Anne's Lace Jelly

7 cups water
30 large Queen Anne's lace flowers
2 packages Sure-Jell
7½ cups sugar

Boil water. Add flower heads. Remove water from heat and steep 10 minutes. Strain off 6 cups tea. Add Sure-Jell and bring mixture to hard boil, stirring constantly. Add sugar all at once; cook, stirring. When tea returns to hard boil, cook, stirring one minute longer. Remove from heat, skim. Pour into sterilized jars and seal.

Plane Of Slain Missionaries Found In Ecuador

Nancy A. Donnelly
National Geographic News Service

TONAMPARE, Ecuador. — Five American missionaries flew into Ecuador's Amazon jungle 38 years ago in a yellow Piper. A week later they were all dead, speared by primitive Indians who believed they were cannibals.

The Huaorani Indians demolished the single-engine plane on a small landing strip on the Curaray River that the Protestant missionaries had code-named Palm Beach.

Days after the Jan. 8, 1956 killings, another missionary flying over the site saw no traces of the plane. Everyone assumed that violent tropical storms had washed it downriver. But this past June, amid the martyred missionaries' graves, two members of the clan that had done the killing stumbled on a piece of metal sticking out of the sand near Palm Beach. They uncovered the front lower fuselage of the Piper, which has been piloted by Nathanael Saint of Huntingdon Valley, Pa.

The discovery inspired a family crusade to recover the Piper, salvage as much of it as possible and piece it together as a memorial to honor the five dead men.

The Saints hope this tribute will encourage future missionaries and further understanding between two vastly disparate cultures. The number of American missionaries has declined world wide in; the past four decades. Some are still being martyred.

Saint's sister, Rachel, 80, has lived peacefully with the Huaorani since 1958, when she moved to Ecuador as a translator with the Summer Institute of Linguistics (Wycliffe Bible Translators). "Ironically, the Indians are very excited about the find," she says. "It's important to them, because the event marks an end to their killing."

After the initial find, Nate Saint's son Stephen, 43, of Ocala, Fla., took charge of the search for the rest of the wreckage.

"The strange thing was that I had just met a pilot in Russia who told me his dream was to find and salvage Dad's plane," he tells National Geographic. "So when I heard, I got right on a plane to Ecuador."

Joining in the search are Steve's son Jaime, 17, and his brother, Philip, along with several Huaorani and William Clapp, a pilot for Mission Aviation Fellowship in Shell, Ecuador. Nate Saint piloted the plane for the fellowship.

The team is steadily recovering half-buried, scattered parts. Each recovery stirs memories of a mission that began with hope and ended in horror.

Discovery of the plane's fragments, says Steve Saint, is "almost as if God is saying, 'I want you to remember what happened here.'"

All five victims were young. Nate Saint was 32; James Elliot of Portland, Ore., 28; Edward McCully of Milwaukee, 28; Peter Fleming of Seattle, 27; and Roger Youderian of Lansing, Mich., 31.

For several months before the landing at Palm Beach, the missionaries periodically flew from Shell over th Huaorani village in the Amazon rain forest, or Oriente.

To win the trust of the reclusive Indians, the men dropped gifts of machetes and aluminum kettles. In return, the Huaorani gave the Americans gifts, including a live parrot.

Most Huaorani are primitive, seminomadic hunters. They have fiercely guarded their territory for centuries, earning them a reputation for savagery.

The Christians were fully aware of the danger, and so they kept their mission a secret.

Their landing was uneventful. For four days, they saw no people. On the fifth day, three naked Huaorani, two women and a man, walked out of the jungle. Fist-size balsa wood ornaments hung in their distended earlobes.

Initially, the meeting was amicable. The missionaries cooked hamburgers for their visitors, shared insect repellent with them, even took them for rides over the dense green forest in the yellow Piper, which the Indians named the "wood bee."

The Americans showed the Huaorani a photograph of Dayuma, a woman from their tribe who had fled many years before, during a wave of intratribal killings.

The missionaries' friendly gestures didn't save their lives.

George, the Americans' nickname for the Huaorani man who had greeted them, told the tribe that the white men were cannibals who had attacked him.

This belief was reinforced by the photograph of Dayuma. George said the image proved that the missionaries had possession of her spirit.

Two days after the missionaries and the Huaorani met, six tribal warriors attacked Palm Beach. One by one, they slaughtered the missionaries with 9-foot spears. Although the missionaries were armed, they chose to fire their guns into the air instead of shooting the Indians.

In 1958, two Huaorani women told Rachel Saint and Elisabeth Elliot, James Elliot's widow, that the Indians had come to recognize that the killings were a mistake. For his lies, George was speared to death.

The Huaorani and American women returned with Dayuma to the tribe to finish the missionaries' work. Rachel Saint and Dayuma still live in the village of Tonampare, a muddy clearing ringed by tin-roofed shacks near Palm Beach.

Kids Find Plenty To Do At Manheim Farm Show

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — The tent near to the exhibits building at the Manheim Farm Show is a special place for children. There they can see a sow feeding her litter of piglets, hold a newly-hatched baby chick, watch two large turkey gobblers strut around their pen, and load a wagon with grain.

That's only a small part of the attractions that both children and adult enjoy.

"I was really surprised to see all these animals," said 6-year-old Casey Seibert of Ephrata.

Casey said there are more animals and things to do this year than last year. His mother, Deb Seibert, an agriculture instructor at Manheim Central High School, supervised the FFA students set up the exhibits and accumulate the animals.

Casey was helping out by telling the children who visited the tent about the newly-hatched baby chicks.

"Here, hold one," Casey said to the children. "It won't hurt you."

Each child also received a Farm Show Coloring Book to take along home with them. Teachers who brought their classes to visit the Farm Show received a teacher's edition booklet with activities that teach children more about agriculture. Here are some activities from the booklet.

"When I first came to the tent, I was really surprised at all the animals," Casey Seibert said. The 6-year-old is the son of Manheim Central FFA instructor Deb Seibert. He answers questions other children have about the chicks.

Six-year-old James and his six-year-old brother Ben experiment with loading grain in a wagon. The brothers are the sons of Trish Walker of Lancaster.

In between showing their hogs at the Manheim Fair, these two friends catch a bite to eat. Brandon Forry, left, is the 12-year-old son of Gary and Lynn Forry of Manheim. Rodney Groff, 11, is the son of Richard and Rachel Groff of Manheim.

Alex, 2, and Katie, 3, find the newly-hatched chicks intriguing. The children's parents are Dean and Donna Beamesderfer of Manheim.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

As I write this article, I am sitting in a hotel in Boston, Massachusetts. Allen and I have been on the road a few days with a group of some 30 people. We traveled through New Jersey, New York, Connecticut and Rhode Island to Newport.

Here we toured a colonial house built in 1748 and called the "Hunter House." Next we waited in a long line to visit the "Breakers" which is the most splendid of Newports mansions. This was the summer home of Cornelius Vanderbilt and it was only used in July and August. The 70 rooms were elegantly furnished and the stairway to the second floor had 40 steps.

One day was spent in Plymouth where we boarded the Mayflower II. There were costumed guides who portrayed the crew and passengers. Life on this ship in 1620 presented great hardships for the 102 passengers who landed at Plymouth Rock.

Our next stop was "Plymouth Plantation" which was an open air Pilgrim village. Here we saw how they lived in 1627. Their gardens were very interesting and contained red beets, spinach, turnips, beans and pumpkins. In a few short years they had prospered.

One of the highlights of this day was seeing the harvesting of cranberries. Our bus stopped at a large field that had been flooded and now as the berries floated on the surface they were being pumped up on a truck. Another smaller truck was loaded with debris and leaves. It was quite a production.

That evening at our hotel we were given keys to room 112. But when we unlocked the door, we found another couple there. All four of us were surprised! After a stop at the office we finally got a key to a room on the fifth floor. It had a king-size bed, a desk, television and upholstered chairs.

After a visit to a nearby shopping mall for our evening meal we had a much needed rest. At least this meal had no mishap as the breakfast one did when a big glass of orange juice was dumped in a man's lap—luckily, he had dry clothes in a suitcase.

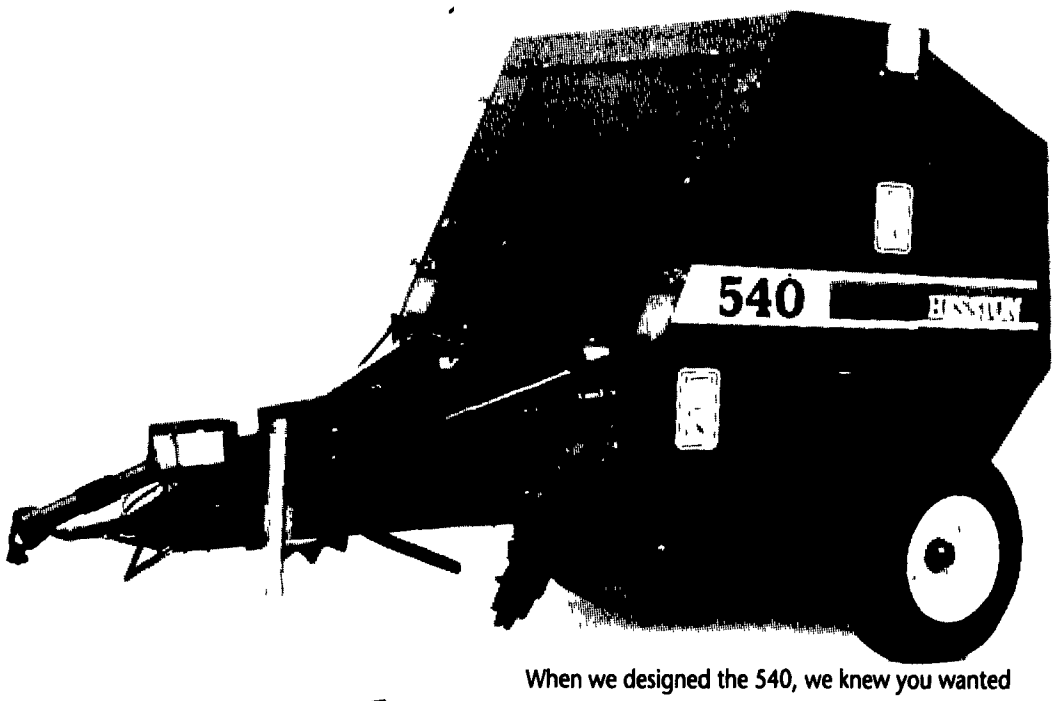
BIGGER BALES. WITHOUT A BIGGER TRACTOR.



When we designed the 540, we knew you wanted a higher capacity round baler with versatility and convenience. We also knew you liked your tractor.

Truth is, you can keep your present tractor. Because with the 540 attached, all you need is a minimum 45 PTO hp tractor. We built the 540 with all the features of a large baler but in a compact, low-profile design. Becker Shows Champion Market Hog At Manheim

Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Melissa Becker has watched her sisters, Karen and Amy, capture the trophy for showing the overall champion market hog. Monday night was Melissa's turn.

The 16-year-old showed a Duroc-Hamp cross at Manheim Farm Show to top 130 entries. The Becker family lives in Manheim but keeps about 30 pigs on an Elizabethtown farm. The sisters, daughters of Marlin and Nancy Becker, brought 12 of the hogs to show, and ended up with five first-placings in individual classes.

Judge Ken Winebark, Lebanon County extension agent, said that the 261-pound heavyweight champion is a really complete hog that levels off at the top, has a sleek body, and is productive appearing, while maintaining leaness.

Showing the reserve champion market hog was Travis Donough. The 244-pound hog was also the medium weight champion. Travis, the son of Ed and LaRue Donough of Manheim, also showed the champion lightweight. Travis and his brother Ryan are consistent winners in both swine and sheep competition at county fairs.

Other section wins went to Pam Lehman, who showed the reserve lightweight champion; Brandon Forry, who showed the reserve medium weight; Adam Forry, who showed the champion medium heavyweight; Suzy Miller, who showed the reserve medium heavyweight; and Jared Forry, who showed the reserve heavyweight.

Showmanship competition was divided into four classes. In the 16-and-over class, Tina Umbrell, daughter of Dennis and Linda Umbrell of Elizabethtown, took first honors. The 19-year-old has been showing some of the offspring of the family's 360-sow operation for seven years. Tina graduated from high school two years ago and works part time as a nursing assistant and part time on the family farm.

In the 14- to 15-year-old showmanship class, Amy Bollinger placed first. She is a consistent winner in showmanship with honors from FFA, 4-H roundup, and Ephrata Fair competitions earlier this season. She is the daughter of Eugene and Carol Bollinger of Manheim.

Thirteen-year-old Lisa Pfautz placed first in the 11- to 13-year-old division. The daughter of Rick and Sue Pfautz of Lititz has been showing for five years and has earned previous showmanship awards.

Ten-year-old Ryan Donough won the 8- to 10-year-old showmanship class. It was the first swine showmanship win for Ryan who has accomplished the same feat numerous times with sheep. Ryan, who is the brother of Travis who showed the reserve champion hog, said that showing pigs is easier than sheep.

Reserve champion market hog is shown by Travis Donough. Judge Ken Winebark said the reserve champion hog had a tremendous broad end and dimension on top.

'Woolly' Competitors Make Fashion Statement

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — The classy look of wool fascinated the crowd gathered at the Manheim Farm Show Lead Line on Monday night.

Seven young women, dressed in outfits made in 80 to 100 percent wool, led sheep, brushed to show off their woolly best, around the show ring.

Thirteen-year-old Sarah Zurin and her Dorset yearling were named the winners in the senior division after the judges tallied their score sheets. Contestants are judged on appearance, control of sheep, clothing, and the sheep's appearance.

Sarah wore a handmade patchwork vest of navy blue and green-navy plaid and a coordinating skirt. Her long blond hair was pulled back into a matching fabric barrett. Her yearling lamb wore a bow and halter made from matching fabric.

The lamb cooperated by stepping her stately best before the judges and crowd.

Previously, Sarah was named the 1993 Novice Shepherd of the Year for her 4-H involvement. The daughter of Gary and Judy Zurin, Sarah is a sixth grader at Manheim Central Junior High. She and her parents previously lived in Jamaica. Sarah would like to become a physician's assistant and return to the mission field.

In the junior division, Jessica Schmidt and her Dorset ewe took top honors. Twelve-year-old Jessica modeled a brick and emerald plaid skirt and vest with a Scottish flair. She wore a red turtleneck and green stockings. A seventh-grader at Swift Middle School, Jessica, the daughter of Laurie and Pete Schmidt, raises 23 Dorsets on the family's Drumore farm.

Sarah's cousin, Kathy Musser and her purebred Suffolk, Agape, placed second in the senior division. The 13-year-old is the daughter of Kenneth and Linda Musser of Mount Joy.

Kathy wore a 100 precent wool white blazer with a teale-colored skirt. Both she and Agape wore matching wool plaid scarves.

Kathy is an eighth grader at Donegal Middle School.

Third place went to Regina Landis who led her Hampshire, Sophia, around the ring. Regina wore a black felt hat, a wool boysenberry sweater, and gray, pleated Pendleton wool skirt. She wore black wool gloves and wrapped a gray scarf around Sophia's neck.

Regina, 14-year-old daughter of Abe and Dottie Landis of Manheim, is a ninth grader at Lancaster Mennonite High School, where she is active in FFA.

In the sheep lead line, much depends upon the cooperation of the sheep. Contestants may look superb and be capable in handling their sheep during the majority of the walk. But a sheep that becomes stubborn and refuses to cooperate causes a drastic lowering of scores.

Other contestants included Amy Haines, 8, who led a Corriedale ewe. She is the daughter of Donna and Stan Haines of Manheim; Jessica Stoltzfus, 14, daughter of Irene and Frank Stoltzfus of Elizabethtown; and Sarah Strickler, 14-year-old sophomore at Solanco High School.

Senior Lead Line placings are from right, Sarah Zurin, first; Kathy Musser, second; Regina Landis, third; Jessica Stoltzfus, fourth; and Sarah Strickler, fifth.

Part-Time Farming Could Get Greener With Ag Alternatives

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Jack Plutocrat, wealthy stockbroker, decides to cash in his portfolio and escape the rat race on a 20-acre spread in rural Pennsylvania.

Jill Proletariat, a welder for Conrail, lives on 15-acres of Pennsylvania land she inherited from her grandfather.

What do these two seemingly different people have in common? According to two experts in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, Jack and Jill may be perfect candidates to become part-time farmers.

Jayson Harper, assistant professor of agricultural economics, says two-thirds of the farms in Pennsylvania are less than 140 acres and about 25 percent are less than 50 acres. More than half the owners of farms smaller than 140 acres have full-time occupations other than farming.

"During the '80s more people began moving to rural areas from cities, and at the same time, for varying reasons, rural residents began looking for ways to use their land profitably," Harper says.

Harper and George Greaser, a senior research associate in agricultural economics, have developed a set of publications called "Agricultural Alternatives," which outline traditional and non-traditional farming enterprises that can be accomplished on small acreages, on a part-time basis, and with family labor.

Covering topics ranging from highbush blueberry farming to ostrich production, these fact sheets are designed for people who have little background in the specific enterprise.

"Our audience could include a whole spectrum of people, from a retired couple in central Pennsylvania to the lawyer from Manhattan who has $50,000 to invest in a pair of breeder ostriches," Harper explains. "Extension agents are the first to get questions about agricultural alternatives, so these publications will serve as a reference for them as well."

The publications' primary focus is on marketing whatever the farmer has decided to produce. In addition, the fact sheets include a detailed cost analysis, sample budgets and estimates of the time and capital required for each enterprise.

"We don't go into a lot of detail on how to grow the crop. The focus is on how to start building a business," Greaser says.

The series includes 17 publications so far and Harper and Greaser expect the final total to be near 60.

Harper says part-time farming in Pennsylvania is particularly advantageous because the state is located within a day's drive of most of the East Coast's population centers. In addition, a small farming operation often can seek out specialized markets. For example, some people of middle-eastern descent prefer lambs raised to 40 pounds that are slaughtered with their tails left on. It might not be economically feasible for a large sheep farmer to target that market, but a smaller operation could fill such a market niche.

Harper says the key to successful part-time farming is researching markets that can be served by a small farm. Whether raising earthworms for the bait industry or boarding horses for owners living in a large city, agricultural alternatives only work if someone wants to buy what you are selling.

"We try to provide unbiased information that gives an accurate picture of what it will cost to enter the business," Greaser says.

"Raising ostriches might have a high profit potential, but it costs up to $50,000 to buy a pair of breeders. If one of the birds dies, you could be out $25,000 or more. You can buy a lot of sheep for that kind of money," Harper explains.

The publication series tries to address the needs of a rural resident who is looking for ways to supplement income as well as the desires of those who want to move to the country and recapture the romance of rural life.

"All we are trying to do is point out alternatives to people who have land and want to use it," Harper says.

OCTOBER - NATIONAL BREAST CANCER AWARENESS MONTH

One of the best investments you can make is to take good care of your own health. By giving your body such basic things as nutritious food, exercise, positive thoughts, fresh air and some sunshine, as well as regular health checkups, you insure yourself of better health and possibly preventing disease.

Women can help themselves in the fight against breast cancer, that dreaded disease which affects over 175,000 women in the United States each year. Early detection and good nutrition are two of the best weapons against this killer of health and body. Survival rates of this disease are highest when it is found and treated early.

What's involved in early detection? It is recommended that women themselves do monthly breast self-exams to detect lumps, or changes in breast tissue. A regular yearly check-up which includes a physician breast exam is another good recommendation. And finally, a mammogram, with physician referral, at a local hospital or clinic. This last step is especially recommended to be done yearly by women 50 years or older because cancer risks increase with age.

What about nutrition? Although a direct relationship between breast cancer and diet has not yet been fully established, it is recommended that a balanced diet which includes low-fat foods such as lean meats, low-fat dairy products and plenty of fruits, vegetables and whole grain products can be helpful in keeping up the body's defenses against the disease. By becoming more aware of preventative measures, women can become more responsible for their own good health-their investment in the future!

For more information on breast cancers contact your county extension office or the American Cancer Society who are working jointly on a project called NALIC-the Northern Appalachia Leadership Initiative on Cancer.

The registration fee of $25 includes the material and instruction. To register, contact the Extension office at 610-696-3500. Registration deadline is October 10.

Part 1 Of Series Focuses On Growth Promotants

Implants Promote Growth, Feed Efficiency

Editor's Note: This is part 1 of a series on growth promotants.

Lowell L. Wilson
Professor Of Animal Science
Penn State

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Growth promotants have been used for many years to improve growth rate and feed efficiency of cattle. Implanted in the ears of cattle, the effects of these promotants are important for both the producer and the consumer.

Done correctly, this procedure returns more net profit per unit of investment than any other management practice and helps keep beef prices reasonable for the consumer.

Although consumers and animal activists are concerned about the use of growth promotants, current information indicates that these products are safe for both the animal's well-being and meat wholesomeness.

More information is available on growth promotants than ever before. Two of the most frequent conclusions from this research indicates that (1) using implants saves feed and other production costs, keeping cost of beef more competitive in the retail counter and (2) growth promotants are safe for both the animal and the consumer.

Government Approval Process

he use of implanted growth promotants in cattle was approved by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) in the late 1960s, after many years of stringent testing. This slow and comprehensive process should assure consumers that there is no reason to be concerned about safety of using growth promotants.

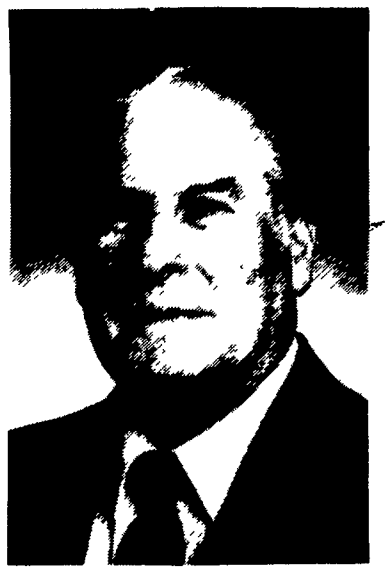
Among the factors that must be ascertained before the FDA clears a product for use are:

- Absence of residues in edible tissues
- Absence of acute toxic effects
- Absence of chronic physiological effects
- Absence of mutagenic or carcinogenic potential
- Enhancement of animal performance or health.

Safety Of Using Implants

Most growth-promoting implants available have subtle estrogenic (female-like) or androgenic (male-like) effects. But the amounts of hormones a person ingests from implanted cattle are insignificant in contrast to the amounts the human body itself produces or that are contained by other foods.

The estrogen content of beef (including that from implanted and nonimplanted steers) and other foods is given in Table 1.1. Based on this evidence, it is clear that implanting cattle increases the estrogen content of beef only slightly. Moreover, beef has less estrogenic activity than many other common foods. The stringent testing of implants has shown that no withdrawal period is required — another indication that the use of implants is safe.



Lowell L. Wilson

Table 1.1 Estrogen concentration in beef and other foods

Food	Nanograms per gram	Nanograms per 3 oz serving
Beef, nonimplanted steer	0.015	1.3
Beef, implanted steer	0.022	1.9
Beef, heifer	0.013	1.1
Milk	0.13	11.0
Soybean oil	2,000	170,000
Wheat germ	4,000	340,000

A nanogam is one billionth of a gram.

Data in Table 1.2 illustrate that the amount of estrogen taken in by eating beef from implanted or nonimplanted steers is inconsequential in contrast to the amount produced naturally by the human body.

Several years ago, studies of Ralgro™: active ingredient is zeranol, a synthetic estrogen-like nonsteroid) determined that meat would have to contain over 18 grams of zeranol per pound of body weight of the meat-consuming subject to be critically toxic. Consequently, a half-pound rat would have to consume 634,920 beef carcasses containing one part per billion of zeranol to reach the critical level of toxicity. The results of another study indicated a human would have to consume 35 tons of meat per day to reach the level of zeranol intake that would cause toxicity.

Studies such as these provide important information on the safety of technology applications such as implantable growth promotants. Today's sophistocated consumer wants assurance that the food they place on their family's table is safe, wholesome, and of high quality.

Editor's Note: Part 2 of this article, to be published next week, discusses what implants are available; common implanting mistakes and corrective measures; growth, feed efficiency, and carcass changes; and implant strategies for different situations.

Table 1.2 Daily human estrogen production (nanograms)

Age, class	Amount/day
Female, before puberty	54,000
Male, before puberty	41,000
Female, nonpregnant	480,000
Female, pregnant	20,000,000
Male, adult	136,000

A nanogram is one billionth of a gram.

Advisory Committee For Grazing Center Forms

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The advisory committee for the newly formed Penn State Grazing Research and Education Center recently met for the first time at University Park. The 12-member committee includes dairy and livestock producers and industry representatives from many segments of agriculture.

The center, a collaborative effort between the College of Agricultural Sciences and the USDA Pasture Research Laboratory on the University Park Campus, brings together 18 agricultural scientists and several extension educators dedicated to improving the sustainability and profitability of animal agriculture through better use of grassland.

The advisory committee will help provide direction for the new center. "We're very pleased with the enthusiasm and dedication of the advisory committee," said Steve Fales, professor of agronomy and co-director of the center.

Faculty members of the center and scientists from the USDA laboratory gave brief accounts of their past and current efforts in grazing research and education. Advisory committee members commented on the presentations and ended the session with their prioritized lists of items for consideration by center members.

"The committee provided excellent input for the center's future direction," said Larry Muller, professor of animal science and co-director of the center.

The committee will meet periodically to provide input for the center.

For more information about Penn State's Grazing Research and Education Center, contact Steven Fales, 248 Agricultural Sciences and Industries Building, University Park, PA 16802, or Lawrence Muller, 316 Henning Building, University Park, PA 16802.

4-H Exchange Club

The Lancaster County 4-H Exchange Club recently hosted the Miami County, Kansas junior leaders.

Twelve 4-H members and 4 chaperones were shown around Lancaster County and the surrounding areas. (This was the second part of an exchange that started last year when Lancaster County Exchange Club traveled to Miami County for a week.) The history of Lancaster County was explained well with a trip to the Lancaster County Wax Museum, and then a tour through the Amish farmland, stopping at the Amish Farm and Home, Kings Crafts to see the trout farm, and the Candle Barn with its Mini zoo.

Kitchen Kettle Village and Park City provided many shopping opportunities for our guests. The Solanco Community 4-H Club included guests at their monthly meeting, showing them 4-H in action. The tour group also spent time at Hershey Chocolate, Hershey Park, Herr's Potato Chip and Root's Farmers Market.

Each family had two "Free Days" when they planned their own sight seeing trips. These included Gettysburg Battlefield, the state capitol, Little Buffalo

You Ask ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ? You Answer

This column is for readers who have questions but don't know whom to ask for the answers.

"You Ask — You Answer" is for non-cooking questions. When a reader sends in a question, it will be printed in the paper. Readers who know the answer are asked to respond by mailing the answer, which will then be printed in the paper.

QUESTION — A Lehighton reader writes that she has a poinsettia plant with some problems. After it bloomed, she cut it back and new green leaves appeared, but now some of the leaves turned yellow and are falling off. Some leaves have white on them that look like mold. Is there an organic way to solve this problem?

QUESTION — Bob of Bob's Radiator Repair in Woodstown, N.J., writes that his daughter is collecting wood items called Woody Woodpecker. She has a few pieces such as a knife holder, canister set, and wax paper holder. She would like to know how many pieces are in the whole set and what each piece is named.

QUESTION — Hilda L. Rossal, Bethel, N.Y., is looking for a person who could teach rag rug weaving on the loom. She lives in the Honesdale area.

QUESTION — Rosemary VanDeWeert, Geneseo, N.Y., would like to know if anyone knows of someone who makes a child-size rocking cow or where it may be purchased.

QUESTION — Coralie A. Grant, Coopersburg, would like a pattern for the old-type yo yo clown doll. She has looked everywhere. Could someone send it to her, please. Tell us if you send it so we can drop this request.

QUESTION — Stanley Siedlecki, Jarrettsville, Md., writes that his woodburning stove emits a strong wood burning smell during humid days and nights. The flue has been cleaned. Is there something that can be done to prevent this odor or condition?

LEADERSHIP AT WORK

State Park, the ocean, and local baseball games. The 4-H'ers also enjoyed swimming and miniature golfing.

The most frequent comments about the differences of our counties usually related to our winding roads and hilly landscapes. Also the highways were much more crowded in Pennsylvania. They took pictures of the farmland because they were able to stand in the country and see many farms around them as well as in the distance.

In Kansas you can look toward the horizon and see one or two farms in the distance. The Pennsylvania Farmers were busy baling alfalfa grass for hay, while the Kansas Farmers were baling prairie grass.

John Scherman explained how they bale their hay into large square bales similar to our round ones in Lancaster County. His family farms 2,000 acres compared to the average Lancaster County farm of 100 acres.

Many of the 4-H'ers were anxious to see covered bridges. Lancaster County had many to offer throughout the county. The Amish customs and way of life were fascinating and interesting to all of them.

Lancaster County bank barns and large chicken and swine houses were new to them also. Many of the 4-H'ers raised swine, but on a much smaller scale.

Large operations common in Lancaster County are not found in Kansas. Kansas farm fields are large and square since all the roads are laid out in square miles. Our fields seemed small and any angular shape possible.

Towns were miles apart in Kansas. Lancaster County towns are located quite close to each other. They could not believe how close the houses were built to each other and how close to the streets the houses are set.

At the farewell party the 4-H club served a pig roast. This also was new to Kansas. They do lots of beef roasts but not pig roasts. Other new foods to our guests were red beet eggs, whoopie pies, shoofly pie, chocolate shoofly pie, subs, cheese steaks, chicken pot pie and peanutbutter pie.

There were many happy memories made as the two groups lived together for one week. This was evidenced by the hugs and tears present as they said their "farewells" at the airport. The letters have been passing in the mail as they continue their new friendships and relive the memories made the past two years.

Monarch Butterflies Migrate

UNIVERSITY PARK, (Centre Co.)—Butterfly fanciers' spirits soar with thousands of monarch butterflies from late August to early October as the regal insects begin their annual migration from the eastern United States and Canada back to Mexico.

Astute and sharp-eyed central Pennsylvanialns can see the butterflies on their long trek home, says an expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, because monarchs prefer the favorable wind patterns coming off the Bald Eagle Ridge that borders the Allegheny Mountains.

"They catch the thermal drafts off the ridge and glide up to about 1,500 feet, where they can travel up to 200 miles a day," explains Dr. Robert Snetsinger, professor of entomology.

According to Snetsinger, monarchs follow the same migratory path every year, often stopping to rest and recuperate at day's end in the same location (and often the same tree) year after year. Pennsylvanians, particularly those who live near monarch stopovers, have a chance to see the insects congregate in groups of 200 to 400 on the branch of a tree.

Snetsinger says one of the best places to see monarchs this year is on Route 504 near Black Moshannon State Park.

"Monarchs are very social insects," says Snetsinger. "When they reach Mexico to overwinter, there are millions of them covering the trees in some eight mountainous areas."

Entomologists are not certain why the butterflies travel the same route every spring, but tagging studies have proven that the individuals from Mexico make it all the way back to the eastern U.S. and central Canada. "The ultimate reason they migrate northward is to eat the abundant milkweed in the eastern United States," Snetsinger says.

"They return south because it's too cold to survive the northern winters and their milkweed food sources die off as well."

Although some rugged individual monarchs make the entire journey from Mexico to Canada, Snetsinger describes the exodus as a multi-generational trip. The monarchs remain inactive from November to February in their high-altitude wintering site about 50 miles west of Mexico City. "The site is a natural icebox. The monarchs don't freeze, but it's cold enough so that they don't lose energy," Snetsinger says.

In February and March, the monarchs fly down to lower elevations, feed and mate. The insects then travel into Texas, where the monarchs lay eggs and continue the migration.

Snetsinger pointed out that there are several other monarch wintering sites. Perhaps the most famous one is in northern California near Pacific Grove.Those monarchs migrate to Oregon, Washington and western Canada before returning to Mexico. Other colonies exist in Florida and Arizona. Snetsinger knows of one Cuban colony that flies over the ocean to winter in the jungles of Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula.

QUESTION — Kenneth Hixon, Warfordsburg, would like the complete address for the Schrader Co. that makes automotive tire repair accessories. He needs parts for #5235 valve vulcanizing tool.

ANSWER — Here are some more suggestions for removing perspiration odor from clothing from a Lehighton reader and others. Spong white vinegar on the area and let set for at least 30 minutes before washing the garment. Or rub the area with a moistened cake of homemade soap. Or try rubbing a paste on the spot and launder as usual. Make sure you use a good quality laundry detergent. Sometimes it helps to switch brands.

ANSWER — Shirley Baer, New Freedom, wanted handmade aluminum made during the late 1930s and 1940s, especially those with designs of animals, flowers, and fowl. Bonnie Brockmeyer, 643 Red Oak Drive, Bel Air, Md. 21014 or call 410-836-5945, has more than 500 pieces. Many of these pieces are very unusual pieces with markings. Can Pa. Swine Producers Stay Competitive?

UNIVERSITY PARK, (Centre Co.) — Pig production is the third largest meat animal industry in Pennsylvania, behind poultry and beef. But pork producers are finding it increasingly tough to compete in a fast-changing industry, said a swine specialist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

With about 8,600 swine operations and an annual income of about $126 million, Pennsylvania ranks fourteenth in pork production nationally. But the odds seem stacked against further expansion.

"An oversupply of pork is driving prices down, and supplies are projected to grow over the next year," said Dr. Ken Kephart, professor of animal science. "That means economic pressures on hog producers are likely to get worse.

"The market is the difference between success and disaster in any swine operation," he said. "It not only determines how much producers make on each hog, but also dictates whether producers make anything at all. When marketing options are limited, producers must give the market what it wants—hogs in the right weight range with desirable amounts of fat and muscling."

Size plays a key role in profitability, but no matter what the size of an operation, staying competitive will be a challenge, Kephart said.

"In operations of 100 sows or less, the family often can provide labor with no out-of-pocket cost. Environmental problems are uncommon and low initial cost means most owners need not make a long-term commitment. Such operations can compete if the producer has a market, but the small size also limits income—often to the point that it can't support a family."

Operations with 100 to 500 sows give producers more market options and usually can support several families. "But finding and keeping qualified workers on hog farms is a problem," said Kephart. "These operations also are big enough to generate nuisance and environmental problems."

Operations with more than 500 sows have lower costs per sow and better labor efficiency. "One person can care for at least twice as many sows as in smaller operations," Kephart said.

In addition, Pennsylvania is a challenging place to raise hogs, Kephart said. "Our slaughter capacity for hogs has declined," he said. "The relative market price we receive now is lower than it was 15 years ago. Pennsylvania producers also pay relatively high prices for corn. Finally, more homes and subdivisions are encroaching on farms in southeast Pennsylvania, where the state's hog production is concentrated."

To remain competitive, producers not only must increase efficiency on their own operations but also recognize factors that affect the image of the entire industry. "Image is important for the producer, but it's vital for the pork industry as a whole," Kephart said.

Manure is a major image problem for swine producers with many nonfarm neighbors. "Manure odor creates many problems with few solutions," Kephart said. "Until we develop better methods of controlling odors, producers need to be as considerate as possible to their neighbors—even when they complain. Odors always seem worse when a farm's appearance and the operator's manners fall short."

Drug residues should not be an image problem, but consumers think they are. "That's why all producers should participate in the National Pork Producers Council's Pork Quality Assurance Program," Kephart said, "But out of several thousand Pennsylvania swine producers, fewer than 100 are currently certified at the program's highest level. Producers need to understand their herd health program, the proper use of drugs, and have a good relationship with their veterinarian."

Ceresville New Holland Sponsors Safety Clinic Project

FREDERICK, Md. — Safe use of equipment is an important part of farm safety, and learning about safety at a young age increases the goal of making the farm a safer place to work.

To promote the safe use of equipment, Ceresville Ford New Holland, Inc. of Frederick, Md. is sponsoring "Safety Clinic 94" on Monday, October 17 at 7:30 p.m. at their place of business.

Dr. Glen Hetzel from Virginia Tech will be presenting a program on the safe use of equipment. Hetzel is involved in the National Safety Council and has done extensive safety related research. He is the safety expert for Virginia extension.

Robert Dinsmore with Ceresville Ford New Holland is encouraging 4-H and FFA members become involved in making farm safety visits, and earning money for their club or chapter.

Members making a farm visit prior to the safety clinic will complete a safety survey form and give a copy of the report to the owner of the equipment. When the owner brings in the completed report to the Safety Clinic, the purchase of the safety items listed on the report will be available at a 10 percent cash discount. The 4-H Club or FFA Chapter which made the survey will receive a 5 percent donation for all cash sales at the dealership made under this arrangement.

Safety equipment which will be available at the 10 percent discount include all shields, roll over protective structures (ROPS), flashers, SMV (Slow Moving Vehicle) signs, lights, cabs, and fenders.

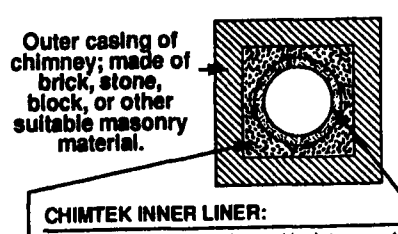
CHIMTEK™
ADVANCED CHIMNEY TECHNOLOGY
SAFER: CHIMTEK is designed to withstand severe chimney fires without breaking or transmitting high temperatures to adjoining combustible materials.
LESS CREOSOTE: Wood smoke contains moisture (H_2O). When the smoke comes into contact with a surface under approx 250 degrees F the water will condense to a liquid. This liquid combined with other products in wood smoke will result in creosote. Creosote can be very dangerous when it ignites. The inside of a CHIMTEK chimney stays much warmer and greatly reduces the amount of creosote formation. In many cases CHIMTEK chimneys are completely clean after years of use.
IMPROVES STOVE PERFORMANCE: The draft produced by a chimney is what pulls oxygen into the fire for combustion. The three main factors affecting draft are the chimney's height, size and temperature. CHIMTEK contains a great amount of a very special insulating material that is not affected by moisture saturation and will not seattle or deteriorate. Poor draft will result in poor combusion. Poor combusion will create more smoke. Smoke is wasted fuel. Newere EPA certified stoves are especially dependent on proper draft to perform properly.
A SURE SOLUTION TO MASONRY CHIMNEY PROBLEMS:



CHIMTEK INNER LINER:
• Made of volcanic pumice and high-temperature refractory cements.
• Round shape provides even temperatures inside flue, and contributes to efficient flow of smoke and flue gases.
• Highly resistant to thermal shock.
• Even if cracks should occur, the round shape and Chimtek Secondary Liner prevent pieces from falling into chimney.
• The volcanic pumice in Chimtek liners adds considerable insulating value
CHIMTEK SECONDARY LINER:
• Provides exceptional insulation to make chimney more efficient and reduce heat transfer to combustible materials.
• Provides structural support for inner liner.
• Will not absorb moisture or creosote.

SELECTING AND MANAGING THE REPLACEMENT HEIFER

As weaning time approaches for most beef herds in Pennsylvania, an important management decision will be made — which heifers will be retained in the herd for breeding. Genetic progress is made in the herd by replacing older cows with heifers. The downside is that if there is a genetic problem, it will also be retained.

A first consideration for many breeders, particularly small breeders, is whether it may be cheaper to buy heifers rather than raise them yourself. This will be particularly true if weaned or bred heifers can be purchased that are genetically superior to those you are currently raising.

For example, if weaned heifers are worth $400 per head and it will take another $400 per head to get a calf on the ground out of them, serious consideration should be given to buying superior bred heifers that are priced at $1,000. By buying them with a pregnancy guarantee, you can insure that a calf will be born.

Most herds will routinely replace 20 percent or more of the cow herd every year. With half of the calves normally as heifers, and realistically expecting only 80-85 percent to actually have a calf, this means 35-50 percent of the heifer calves born every year will be retained.

Selection of heifers that are better than the cows currently in the herd is necessary to making genetic improvement. This implies there must be some measure of expected productivity to select the right ones. Within herd weaning weight ratios will be a good start because this will identify the heifers that have the high milking dams, were born early in the calving season, and/or possess the best genetics for growth.

Heifers sired by bulls with high EPDs for milk, maternal weaning weight, and low birth weight will also be desirable. This method of selection removes the greatest amount of risk in retaining the right ones from the calf crop.

Selecting heifers born early in the calving season will insure they will be older at breeding time and more likely to be cycling. It also usually implies the heifers will be heavier. For most breeders, the heifers should weigh at least 750 pounds at breeding. Proper nutrition between weaning and breeding is essential to be sure the 500-pound weaned heifer can reach the target weight by the next spring.

Research show that heifers that are growing at a reasonable pace during this period will tend to be more fertile. This is one reason small breeders may want to consider purchasing heifers. The young, growing heifer has a different nutritional requirement than the rest of the herd, and the facilities and labor necessary to see that they are fed correctly may not be available or are impractical.

Be sure the heifers are properly wormed and vaccinated at weaning. Our recent experience with BVD in Pennsylvania brought home the importance of a good vaccination program for a cow herd. Unbred heifers can be given modified live vaccines for the important viral diseases, and then can be boostered annually with the mix of killed and live vaccines.

Proper boosters must be given to heifers to get antibody titers high enough to do any good in a disease challenge. Purebred breeders and those selling other breeding cattle will want to consider calfhood vaccination for brucellosis.

Two other selection tools are available. First is measurement of pelvic area. Most breeders should probably set a minimum value for yearling pelvic area and cull all of the heifers that do not reach that minimum value. What should the value be? That is an indiviual answer, but one key is to divide the pelvic area by 2.1. Research shows this will tell you what the maximum birth weight will be for the heifer before the probability of calving trouble increases.

For example, a heifer with a pelvic area of 180 square centimeters should have a calf weighing up to 85 pounds with no trouble. Secondly, consider the frame size of the heifer. This trait will be the best indicator of mature size that you have. Remember that frame size will tend to increase weight, but will also increase production costs.

The maintenance feed requirement of a cow is based on her weight, and it takes more hay to maintain a 1,400-pound cow than it does to maintain an 1,100-pound cow. The heavier cow will necessarily have to wean a bigger calf to "pay the freight." Simply selecting the biggest heifers each year may eventually lead to a cow herd with too much maintenance cost.

Breed heifers about two weeks ahead of the cow herd for the first calf. This trick will allow heifers to calve first so calving management can be concentrated where it is needed the most. It will also buy a little extra time for the heifer after calving so she can be bred back on time, and "in sync" with the rest of the herd, for the second calf.

Heifers are an important part of a successful beef operation. Their selection should be a well planned and careful part of good management.

ASCITES IN THE FALL

G. F. Barbato
Associate Professor
Poultry Science
Penn State

It's that time of year again! We're experiencing those beautiful warm days and cool nights that make you want to "sleep in."

Autumn in Pennsylvania is one of the most beautiful combinations in the country. Our thoughts turn to harvests, drives in the country, and the Nittany Lions.

But, if you're a chicken, it can also be one of the most treacherous of seasons.

It has long been recognized that spring and fall are the seasons when post-hatch mortality among commercial broiler flocks can skyrocket and seriously reduce profits. The season is characterized by daily swings in temperature and the possibility of poor ventilation in the broiler house.

Ascites accounts for at least 50 percent of all post-14 day mortality among broilers and is characterized by fluid accumulation in the abdominal cavity. This can be caused by those "oh-so-wonderful" fall days. More specifically, it is the below-60 degrees F evenings that have the most profound effect on the development of ascites.

Cool temperatures stimulate an increase in basal metabolic rate, thereby increasing body heat generation and enhancing tissue demand for oxygen and nutrients. Cardiac output, which is defined as the volume of blood the heart pumps per minute, increases as a consequence of higher tissue metabolic requirements. This increase in cardiac output results in pulmonary hypertension and right ventricular hypertrophy, which precedes the ascites syndrome, and has been observed worldwide.

It has been widely accepted that the fastest growing individuals in the flock are the most susceptible to ascitic mortality, based mostly on two sets of observations. First, slower growing strains tend to be less susceptible to ascites than faster growing strains. Second, feed restriction (or almost any management scheme which reduces body weight) also reduces the incidence of ascites in a flock.

There are several caveats to this type of reasoning: 1) among commercial broilers, growth and fat deposition are virtually synonymous. Any attempt to reduce growth has been accompanied by a reduction in both fat and muscle growth, so it is not clear if ascitic mortality is due to fast growth, per se, or some aspect of obesity or metabolism. 2) Due to association of genetic improvement in body weight at processing age with an increase in early post-hatch growth, it has been assumed that early growth is responsible for ascitic susceptibility. This assumption has not been tested, nor, based upon available data from our laboratory on the inheritance of growth at different ages, is it warranted. 3) Feed restriction protocols have reduced the incidence of ascites, presumably, by slowing down early growth and allowing for "compensatory" or catch-up growth. It should be remembered that these management/nutrition studies are based upon observations under certain environmental conditions, and are not indicative of genetic relationships, which must be determined under controlled conditions.

Recent research at Penn State has resulted in several unique observations regarding ascites. In a set of experiments which tested the effect of grow-out temperature on ascites, we found that continuous exposure to temperatures of 60 degrees F after broilers were 14 days of age resulted in a two- to three-fold increase in ascitic mortality, depending on the strain of broiler. This suggests that temperatures most people consider to be mild can have a serious impact on the development of ascites.

It may also be prudent to use a little bit more fuel in the fall and winter to maintain slightly higher temperatures in the broiler house. Of course, this strategy requires a bit more work to maintain proper ventilation — avoid closing all of the curtains, all the time, which could impair ventilation and negatively impact the birds.

Research involving different genetic stocks have conclusively shown that the susceptibility of a strain to ascites is not dependent upon the growth rate of the birds. Indeed, three commercial strains having 49 day body weights ranging from 2,850-3,200 grams exhibited cold-induced ascitic mortality of 30 to 50 percent. We have also shown that two experimental lines of chickens produced by selection for growth at different ages have identical body weights at 42 days of age, but the line selected for high early growth had a 5 percent incidence of cold-induced ascites, while the line selected for high late growth had a 60 percent incidence of cold-induced ascites.

These data suggest that genetic improvement in growth is not causally related to ascites. So, if you're choosing a breed for grow-out, do not be swayed by a salesman who tries to tell you that better growing breeds will die of ascites. It may not be so. Pick your breeds on the basis of production characteristics necessary for your operation, then manage them properly to reduce ascites.

Speaking of management . . . Further work at Penn State has shown that early feed restriction can reduce cold-induced ascites in commercial broilers from 37 to 20 percent. Evidence of pulmonary hypertension, measured as ventricular hypertrophy, was also decreased among birds which had a 75 percent feed restriction from 4-11 days post-hatch. This sounds great, doesn't it? The problem is that the major organ/tissue that was impacted was the breast muscle.

Agronomist Offers Fall Nutrient Management Tips

UNIVERSITY PARK, (Centre Co.) — As the weather gets cool and the leaves turn color, Pennsylvania farmers should be carefully planning their nutrient management strategy for the fall and winter months.

But many farmers delay or ignore fertility planning during the busy fall harvest season, said Dr. Douglas Beegle, professor of agronomy in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "It is economically and environmentally important to make time for nutrient management," he said.

The first step in the process is the soil test. "Fall is the best time of year to perform soil tests, said Beegle. "It's the time when nutrient levels are lowest, so you can get a good idea of what nutrients are needed most in your fertility program. Fall testing also gives farmers plenty of time before spring to get results back and make good decisions about the types and quantities of nutrients to apply."

Whether a farmer tests soil in the spring or fall, it's important that tests be done at the same time each year, Beegle said. "That way you can get consistent data and keep track of trends in your soil's nutrient levels."

Autumn is a time when a lot of manure is spread on fields, although the ideal time to apply manure is in the spring, closer to the time of peak plant growth. If you do plan a fall manure application, Beegle says it is important to plan carefully and not arbitrarily apply equal amounts to all fields.

"Fields should be prioritized, based on several factors," he said. "High priority fields should be those that test low for various nutrients, or those going into corn next season, since corn needs a lot of nitrogen. Also, consider fall or winter manure application for fields that usually are wet in the spiring, so you can avoid digging ruts or compacting soft soil." He said fields to avoid in the fall are those on steep slopes or near streams, where nutrients are likely to wash off before they can be utilized by next year's crops.

Before deciding how much manure to apply, said Beegle, have it analyzed so you know what you are spreading on the fields. Then, take into account the nutrient needs of the crops you plan to raise. It also is a good idea to calibrate your manure spreader to be sure the correct amount is being applied.

Planting a winter cover crop in the fall is usually a sound decision for a couple of reasons, according to Beegle. Without a cover crop, only about 20 percent of the nitrogen in the manure applied this fall still will be available to new crops next spring. By planting a winter grain or a cover crop, such as wheat or rye respectively, you can increase nitrogen utilization from this fall's manure to about 40 percent. "The cover crop will scavenge nitrogen so it can't be lost," said Beegle. "Then when it's killed or plowed under in the spring, that nitrogen will be released for the next crop."

Beegle said a cover crop also can provide forage for livestock feed. "Cover crops can be planted as late as November," he said.

icantly reduced tissue among the feed treatments. A reduction in breast muscle probably reduced metabolic demand, and hence cardiac output, thereby reducing ascites. So the observed improvement in ascites susceptibility came at the cost of reduced breast yield! So be wary of plans to reduce ascites until you know what other production parameters they impact and be sure they fit your production goals.

All told, it looks like another beautiful autumn in Centre County and, with any luck, we'll be Rose Bowl Bound by winter. Remember that the fluctuating temperatures in the spring and fall wreak havoc with management systems, and even mildly cool temperatures can cause an increase in ascites and related mortality.

With a little effort and patience, we can develop new management strategies to remedy problems in the field, in the short-term. Long term solutions will be available as we understand the cause of the problem, after which we can incorporate the results into an effective genetic and/or nutritional plan.

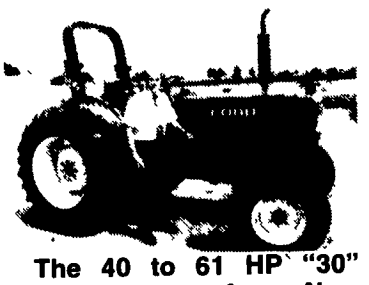
New Holland Updates Tractors

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The popular 3-cylinder "30" Series New Holland tractors have been updated to boost power and improve operator convenience, according to Product Manager Dave Dell.

The Model 3430 has been boosted to 40 horsepower. The "3930" is a 45 HP unit while the Model 4630 is now equipped with a turbocharged engine for 55 horsepower at 2200 RPM. The "30" Series also includes the 4-cylinder 62 HP Model 5030.

The new 192 CID turbo engine in the"4630" provides high performance with lower noise levels, cleaner exhaust and lower fuel consumption, said Dell. He noted that the engine has oil-jet piston cooling to reduce internal operating temperatures.

Controls for the four models have been updated, too. The 8x8/16x8 synchronized shuttle shift is mounted on the left side of the steering column for easier operation. The 3-point hitch control has been relocated and a new PTO control provides improved engagement control. A new electric engine fuel shutoff eliminates control cables.



The 40 to 61 HP "30" Series tractors from New Holland have been updated with new controls and higher horsepower. ROPS units are foldable for use where limited overhead clearance mandates. The 8x8/16x8 synchronized shuttle shift is column mounted for easy left-hand operation to simplify shuttle work.

A new foldable ROPS let the tractor go through low doorways The ROPS unit folds by removing two pins, Dell said. He emphasized the ROPS unit should be used in the raised position anytime clearance allows.

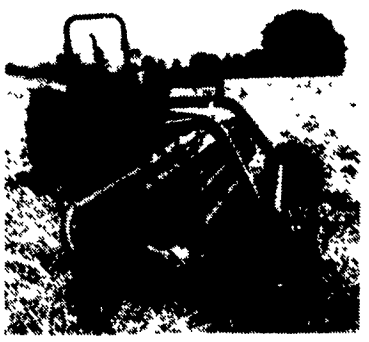
Deere Announces 4 Side-Delivery Rakes

MOLINE, Ill. — John Deere has replaced its 652, 662, 672, and 673 side-delivery rakes with its new 54, 64, 74, and 75 models that provide increased performance and durability. The company also announced its new 42 bale ejector with improved ease of operation that replaces the 40 bale ejector.

The new rakes feature one 3-point hitch model (54) and three pull-type machines. The two largest rakes have a working width of 9 1/2 feet to handle swaths cut with 9-foot mowerbars or mower/conditioners.

The rakes can also turn wide windrows produces with 12- to 16-foot auger platforms. The two smaller models have 8 1/2-foot rake in widths to accommodate 7-foot swaths, or windrows behind 7- or 9-foot mower/conditioners. The model 75 features right-hand delivery.

The rakes have five tooth bars with variable tooth spacing. Standard 4 5/8-inch spacing is for normal raking conditions. Optional 2 5/16-inch spacing is provided by installing additional teeth in the predrilled bar holes for improved performance in short, light crops. A choice of rubber ball-joint or steel teeth; is available. New dual bearings on the front reel disk improve disk stability.



The John Deere Model 64 side-delivery rake features a ground-driven reel that is powered by both rear wheels for positive drive in uneven terrain. The model 64 has a raking width of 8 1/2 feet.

The 74 and 75 rakes can be equipped with either a ground-driven reel or optional hydraulic reel drive. The ground-driven reel is powered by both rear wheels for positive drive in uneven terrain. Hydraulic reel drive allows the operator to adjust reel speed from 60 to 120 rpm to match crop conditions independent of ground speed. The 64 is available with ground drive, the 54 with hydraulic reel drive.

Cooperative Increases Equipment Capacity

SHIPPENSBURG, (Franklin Co.) — Cumberland Valley Cooperative Association is completing another phase in its long range plan to increase the quality and service it offers to the local farm community. Future plans include the doubling of storage capacity for grain.

Recently completed at the cooperative is the addition of a new pellet mill to increase the flexibility of custom-blended feeds. Other improvements made last year have been the addition of feed cleaning equipment and new roller mills. Both were installed to further improve the quality of products manufactured by the cooperative.

Under construction is a $200,000 project to increase the capacity of the grain handling equipment. Upon completion, the facility at I-81 on Mount Rock Rd. will be able to handle 3,500 bushels per hour of incoming grain.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Elanco Animal Health has named Dr. Cristopher A. Young, of Bowling Green, Ky., as marketing and technical associate for veterinary products.

A graduate with a D.V.M. from Auburn University, Young will be working with marketing and technical service activities supporting Micotil® and Tylan® Injection in the United States.

Young, who studied in a pre-veterinary biology curriculum at Western Kentucky University, previously worked for Elanco in 1992. In this internship, he helped launch Micotil to veterinarians in the Midwest. He also has worked in large feedyards as well as dairy and swine operations. Young is a member of the American Association of Bovine Practitioners and the American Association of Swine Practitioners.

"As a veterinarian, I look forward to utilizing my technical knowledge, Micotil launch experience, and other field background to develop programs that will assist veterinarians in all cattle markets," said Young.

New Holland To Drop Ford From Company Name

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The New Holland Company will no longer carry the name "Ford" as part of its official company name, as a result of a 1991 sales agreement, according to a company spokesperson.

When Fiat, of Italy, bought the company from Ford Company, an agreement was made to phase out the "Ford" name with phasing out of ownership by Ford, according to Gene Hemphill, spokesman for the New Holland Co., at its Americas headquarters in New Holland.

However, the company name change does not reflect any elimination of company size, nor in product availability.

In fact, according to Hemphill, the adoption of the original New Holland name reflects a resurgence of the company's historic agressiveness to develop leading-edge products.

When Ford company had acquired New Holland years ago, it placed the Ford name as a prefix to the already well-known New Holland name.

With the absence of Ford in company management and ownership, there is no reason to continue using the Ford name.

According to Hemphill, the sales agreement between Fiat and Ford stipulated that the name change was to occur in 1995, the estimated time for Ford Co. to lose all ownership. However, the Ford Co. has not had any ownership in New Holland since the summer of 1993.

On a global basis, the company name has been "New Holland" since the 1991 sale. Global headquarters are in London. However, in the Americas it still retained the "Ford" prefix.

"Worldwide, it has been New Holland since '91," Hemphill said in a telephone interview, adding that, at the same time in the Americas, "It was also called Ford-New Holland.

"As the 'Ford' share of the company diminished, the right time finally came to start to emphasize (that change)," Hemphill said. "Officially we are going to reincorporate next year as New Holland Inc., and New Holland Limited, in Canada."

The "Ford" name will not disappear from the brand of tractors that New Holland manufactures and markets for some time.

Ford-brand tractors will continue to be manufactured by the company, according to Hemphill until 2001. After that, a decision has not been announced.

"Even though the name is changing, the product is going to be the same," Hemphill said. "New Holland is respected around the world, it makes it easy for a name change."

He said that attitudes within the company are also up, with the name change.

"It's challenging and exciting. After several years of rescession, it's nice to get the blood flowing.

"We are really aggressive pur ing product development," Hemphill said. "In the past 12 months, a lot of new products have been introduced We're planning more in the future."

He said that the company's historic strategy is back in gear and that it itends to lead in the developing new products, continue its reputation of providing parts and service and to "keep on the cutting edge of technology, and once (the product) gets out there, to keep (customers) supplied with parts and service.

"We've come through a full circle of sorts," he said. "100 years ago, in 1895 New Holland first incorporated. Since then there have been a lot of name changes, and ownership changes. It's kind of nice, on (the company's) 100th anniversary to be going back to that name."

First Conservation Expo Successful

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — The first annual Lancaster County Conservation Field Day held at the farm of David Becker attracted 100 residents recently to show many ways in which conservation practices can work to protect water quality.

At the field day, Joel Myers, state agronomist, led a discussion on the importance of crop residue and showed how to measure percent residue cover. Bob Anderson, county crops agent, demonstrated new methods of measuring nitrogen requirements in corn.

Jere Swarr, Lancaster County outstanding cooperator, and district and Soil Conservation Service personnel led a walking tour of the farm and discussed how conservation can improve farming business. Becker's farm contains contours, waste storage and runoff control, and makes use of other best management practices that were highly visible and well maintained.

Ed Rits, Rits Consulting, provided a vivid description of different methods of developing a rotational grazing system for a farm. It was complete with 15 types of fencing and 10 different watering systems. He also discussed types of forages and the economics behind a grazing program.

Bruce Hellerick, Penn State extension horticulturist, gave a tour of the various weeds which may be in a lawn and spoke about methods of dealing with them without a large impact on water quality. Marvin Stoner, sewage enforcement officer for Mount Joy Township, presented his ideas on how to be sure your septic field is functioning properly. He discussed the importance of regular cleaning and warned residents about adding chemicals to their septic tanks.

Exhibitors included the Chesapeake Bay Alliance and public groups such as the Center for Rural Pennsylvania. In addition, there was a petting zoo and other entertainment for kids.

The district indicated that future considerations will be given to a new format designed to include more demonstrations. Possible topics include shallow manure injection, manure spreader calibration, cultivation for weed control, and practical water conservation in the home.

Joel Myers, Penn State agronomist, right, spoke about the importance of crop residue at the recent Lancaster County Conservation Field Day. The field day attracted about 100 county residents.

The first annual field day also had a petting zoo and other activities for youngsters.

House Approves Farmland Preservation Bill

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The House of Representatives has approved legislation Sen. Noah Wenger sponsored to improve the state's Farmland Preservation Program.

Senate Bill 1629 would streamline the program and place a cap on the amount the state will spend per acre to preserve land, according to Wenger, who sponsored the bill that created the Farmland Preservation Program.

Wenger said the believes the program has been extremely successful, but should "be fine-tuned now, so it continues to run smoothly and effectively."

The senator's legislation would ensure that only counties with state-approved farmland preservation programs, including Lancaster County, receive annual funding from the state.

"As the law now stands, every county receives an annual allocation, although not all actively participate in the farmland preservation program," Wenger said. "This ties up funding unnecessarily. Under my legislation, counties that presently do no t participate would not receive a share of the state funding."

However, he stressed that counties would become eligible for annual funding when they set up a preservation board.

Senate Bill 1629 would also place al limit on the amount of money the state would spend to purchase conservation easements. The bill would restrict state spending to $10,000 per acre. Wenger stressed that counties would retain the ability to contribute as much as they see fit to purchase an easement.

"Un fortunately, preserving farmland is an expensive investment, and the state must set limits in the interest of maintaining a reasonable budget for the program," Wenger said.

The bill would also clarify that retired farmers have the right to build a home on land preserved under the program.

"In the past, there has been some confusion about whether retired farmers should qualify for this right, because the law specifies that the farm's operators alone retain that ability," Wenger said. "But farmland preservation is about keeping farms in families, and I believe that the men and women who built the farm should be able to retire on the land with their families. I think more people will agree that a single retirement house for the farmer is different from a shopping mall or housing development."

Wetlands Project Travels Road To Better Science

UNIVERSITY PARK, (Centre Co) — Commuters traveling down a recently completed section of Pennsylvania Route 220 from Altoona to Bald Eagle can observe an ongoing cooperative scientific experiment

Eagle-eyed drivers can see several wetlands constructed for the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation along the route. A team of researchers from the College of Agricultural Sciences' School of Forest Resources are working with PennDOT to observe how man-made wetlands function.

"We're looking at how these created wetlands compare with natural wetlands," said Dr. Robert Brooks, associate professor of wildlife ecology. He says the five wetlands created by PennDOT for the Route 220 project are particularly important for wetlands research because this project is the largest ever done by the transportation agency.

Penn State's Cooperative Wetlands Center compares data collected from natural wetlands located in the State College area with information collected from created wetlands, such as those constructed by PennDOT and others.

The data collected from the "reference wetlands" include soil analysis, water levels, plant life and wildlife.

Exchanging scientific information benefits both PennDOT, which can discover how its sites compare to natural wetlands, and Penn State, which gets an opportunity to see how a created wetland develops.

"The five sites cover more than 50 acres in all, and vary in size and location," Brooks said.

The PennDOT wetlands project is required under state and federal law, said Bill Savage, an environmental planner for Penn DOT. To construct highways through wetlands areas, PennDOT must get a permit that requires the agency to replace the wetlands it has disturbed with created wetlands that function as natural sites do. "It's important to us that these wetlands work out," Savage said. "Each one we build tells us more about how to improve."

Brooks emphasizes that each wetland must be monitored because environmental conditions can change radically from site to site, even those only a few hundred yards apart.

"All wetlands are not created equally," Brooks said. "Penn DOT is striving to create wetlands equivalent to the natural wetlands that were in the path of the highway."

Brooks said that other wetlands created by PennDOT have improved over time. Monitoring of the Route 220 sites by Penn DOT consultants will begin this month and continue for about five years.

The information shared by the university and PennDOT also can be applied to another created wetland not for from the Route 220 sites. At the Peterson Industrial Park in Tipton, Pa., Penn State monitors a 15-acre created wetland built through a cooperative effort by Altoona Enterprises, the industrial park, and the Ben Franklin Technology Centre. Data from this site also is used to gain a clearer picture of how wetlands develop and function.

"Wetland creation technology is still in its infancy," Brooks said. "The research on Penn DOT's sites, the Tipton site and others will help set standards by which future projects can be measured.

"Our goal is to learn how to build a better wetland. Each time we build one, we learn more about what makes wetlands function," Brooks said. "To see how wetlands develop over time, you have to have many different sites to make comparisons."

This is why the Cooperative Wetlands Center is working with agencies such as PennDOT, the Pennsylvania Department of Natural Resources, the Environmental Protection Agency, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and industries to monitor numerous created wetlands in Pennsylvania and neighboring states.

PennDOT's Savage says the sites' scientific performance has surprised both the scientists and industry. "We have all these elaborate plans from agencies telling us what should be in the wetlands, but these sites have really blossomed with plant and wildlife. In fact, Mother Nature is doing a pretty good job of helping us create wetlands."

Fact Sheets Detail Raising Ostriches, Emus, Rheas

UNIVERSITY PARK, (Centre Co.) — Pennsylvania, traditionally known as a dairy state, is staking a claim as leading emu, ostrich, and rhea state as well

Those birds can be profitable for some farms, but markets for their meat, oil and other products are not yet well-established, said an expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Raising these birds may be a viable alternative for small-scale and part-time farm operations with adequate investment capital," said Zoann Parker, associate extension agent in Lancaster County. " Land and husbandry requirements are minimal compared to some other livestock operations."

Ostriches, emus and rheas are ratites, flightless running birds that have no keel on their breastbone. Parker, George Greaser, senior research associate in agricultural economics, and Jayson Harper, assistant professor of agricultural economics, have prepared three booklets on ratite farming.

The booklets offer detailed information about raising ostriches, emus or rheas, including prospective budgets and information about marketing, establishing an operation, nutrition, breeding, incubation and housing. Each publication also lists sources of further information.

Adult ostriches, the world's largest birds, weigh about 450 pounds and stand eight feet tall. They produce meat, feathers and soft, durable leather. "Ostrich skin boots are popular, and the meat has a gourmet market," Parker said.

Adult emus stand five to six feet tall and weigh an average of 110 pounds. "The major market for emus is breeder stock, but emu oil is used in skin care products and pharmaceuticals. The skin can be used for high-quality leather, and the meat has a gourmet market," Parker said.

Fully grown rheas weigh up to 80 pounds and stand five feet tall. "The major market for rheas is for breeder stock," Parker said, "Meat and leather markets need to be further developed."

There are several ways to establish a ratite operation. "Purchasing and incubating eggs is the lowest-cost method, but also is highest in risk," Parker said, "Buying chicks more than three months old can be more cost-effective because the mortality rate is greatly reduced."

Producers also can purchase yearlings or young adults. "Yearlings are more expensive than chicks, but should be productive within two to three years," Parker said, "The most expensive method is to purchase proven breeders, two or three birds that have produced fertile eggs together. While it's the most expensive, it also allows the buyer to begin production in the next season."

To receive the publications, contact your county's Penn State cooperative extension office. For more information about raising ratites, contact Zoann Parker, Penn State Cooperative Extension, 1383 Arcadia Road, Room 1, Lancaster, PA 17601-3149.

All-American Dairy Show Coverage Continued From Last Week

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The national dairy shows held during the week-long Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show provides some of the best competition for Keystone dairy enthusiasts to enter, or observe.

With dairy cattle breeders coming to the state Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg last week from 20 states and Canada, the annual show provides one of the finest opportunities for Pennsylvania breeders to observe many top quality dairy cattle close to home.

And many Pennsylvanians enter the national contests, vying for top honors with breeders from New England, Mid-Atlantic state, the South East and Mid West.

The competition levels are tough, however a number of Pennsylvanians compete successfully, in each of the six breed shows.

In the Eastern National Holstein Show, a pair of 5-year-old cows were selected by judge Richard Keene, of Gilberstville, N.Y. as the grand and reserve grand champion animals.

The grand champion was Fairhill Enhancer Song-ET, owned by Marion Andrew, of Centreville, Md.; the reserve grand champion was C Maple Arch Jethro Patches, shown by Bernie and Meagan Fry, of Roc-Hil-Val Holsteins, in Woodstock, Va.

Steve and Chris Wood, of Pengate Farm in Littlestown, were named premier breeder and exhibitor this year, and were among several Pennsylvania breeders who showed well in the national show.

In the Eastern National Ayrshire show, Douglas Evans, from Sunny Acres Farm, in Georgetown, N.Y., had a good showing, not only taking both the premier breeder and exhibitor awards, but also showing the grand and reserve grand champions. His senior 3-year-old, Sunny Acres JJ Bouquet, was grand champion, while his 4-year-old, Sunny Acres JJ Beth, was reserve grand champion.

Evans also showed animals that topped several show classes.

In the Eastern National Brown Swiss show, Charles Lee Chaney, of New Windsor, Md., showed the grand champion, a 5-year-old, Hawthore Rythmic Rikki, while CIE Harwood Titan Becky, owned by William Kelly III, of Winchester, N.H., was named reserve grand champion by judge Steve Tuman, of Willow Wells Farm, in Minnesota.

The National Guernsey Show grand champion was a 4-year-old cow owned by Alison Littlefield, of Watertown, N.Y.. Alison was also named premier breeder of the show and showed the reserve junior champion.

The reserve grand champion of the show was Burgess Farm Franks Passion, shown by Diane Burgess, of Bradford, Vermont.

But Pennsylvanians also garnered honors — Holly Ligget, of Enon Valley, showed the junior champion, Trotacre Bucky Mamie, while Amber Clark, of Snider Homestead Farm, in New Enterprise, was named premier exhibitor.

In the Mid-Atlantic Regional Jersey Show, 5-year-old Pennsmith T J Mindy, jointly owned by Mike and Billy Joe Heath and Allen Stiles, and kept at Spring Valley Farm, Westminster, Md., was named grand champion by judge Wayne Sliker, of St. Paris, Ohio.

Waverly Farm, of Clearbrook, Va., showed a number of cattle and is involved in full or part ownerships of several animals shown. The operation showed the reserve grand champion Jersey, WF Toptin Slipper, a 4-year-old.

In the Eastern National Milking Shorthorn show, a New Hampshire syndicate — the "Lucy Syndicate" — showed the grand champion animal, Kingsdale Lucy, a 3-year-old. The Lucy Syndicate is involved with GMC Farm, of Cornish Flat, N.H.

The reserve grand champion was Pinesedge Fancy Joan-EXP, owned by Samuel Yoder, of Pinesedge Farm, Batavia, N.Y. She was also named best bred and owned of the show.

The results of the shows, complete with animal names, owners and home locale follow. They give an indication of the strength of the shows and the top quality breeders who may live nearby.

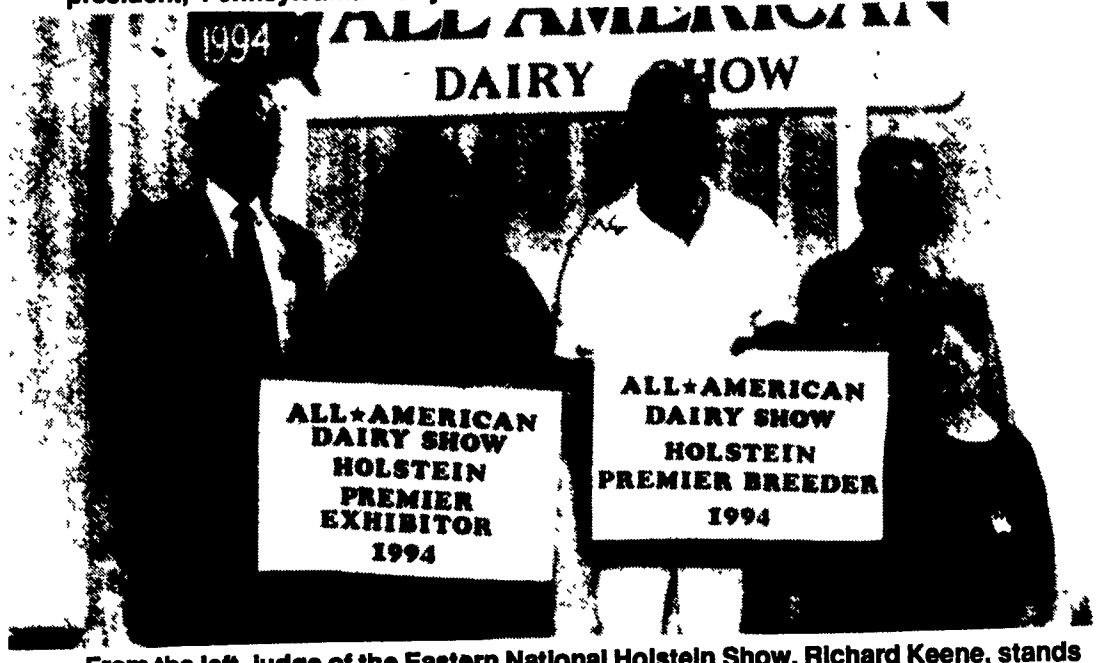
The second high selling consignment in the Eastern National Holstein sale was the excellent show winner Osdel Endeavor Mark Cinder EX-93 consigned by Mike and Cindy Weimer and purchased by US Superior Genetics from Wisconsin. The selling price was $6,900.

Steve Spencer, Penn State dairy science department, left, received the Image award at the All-American Dairy Show for his service to the show over the years. The award was given at the buffet on Wednesday evening prior to the Holstein sale. Making the presentation is Patty McMurray, chairperson for the award selection and obie Snider, president, Pennsylvania Dairy & Allied Industries Association.



From the left, judge of the Eastern National Holstein Show, Richard Keene, stands with premier breeder and exhibitor winners Steve and Chris Wood and herdsman Richard Lehman, and the Wood's son Clayton. The Woods, who along with Robert Gitt own Penn-Gate Farm in Littlestown, were also named the premier breeder and exhibitor of the Pennsylvania Fall Championship Show.

Neighbors Help Neighbors Protect Stream

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.)— On Thursday, October 13, the public is invited to attend an "open house" meeting for the purpose of viewing and discussing the recently completed stream fencing project on the Lester Hursh dairy farm in East Donegal Township. The meeting is scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. and will conclude at noon at the historic one-room schoolhouse owned and located next door to the Donegal Presbyterian Church. Refreshments will be provided.

The Donegal Creek, site of the stream fencing project, has witnessed much local history. The site of the commonwealth's first fish hatchery was located immediately upstream from the project area. Remnants of the American Shad hatchery date back to 1873.

Donegal Creek has two main water sources, each with their unique part in history. One of the sources comes from the basement of Cameron Estate, home of the late John Cameron, who served under the late President Lincoln as Secretary of War. The other source springs forth from the site of the "Witness Tree Memorial," where this country's forefathers gathered around an oak tree and made a covenant to gain independence from British rule.

"This project shows the kind of cooperation among neighbors that's necessary for stream protection projects to succeed on many of our farms in Lancaster County," said Mark Metzler, Lancaster County conservation district employee.

Members of the Donegal Fish and Conservation Association believe that sportsmen need to do their part in protecting the stream. Many farmers just don't have much time to maintain a fence along a creek. This group of sportsmen is willing to do the necessary maintenance work.

Stream bank fencing projects, which prevent livestock from trampling stream banks and protect herd health from waterborne diseases, have been gaining popularity in Pennsylvania as a cost-effective means of improving water quality and stream habitats. In this project, 800 feet of the stream was fenced off. Through the volunteer work of the Donegal Fish and Conservation Association (a local sportsman group that is active in preserving cold water trout streams, organized a Fly fishing club, and maintains a Trout nursery), they constructed the fence and have agreed to maintain it. The sportsmen received technical, educational, and financial assistance through the members of the Lancaster Stream Bank Fencing Work Group. The work group is comprised of public agencies and private organizations which meet informally to share information and coordinate efforts for projects that improve water quality. Many businesses joined in to make this project a huge success.

The members of the Donegal Fish and Conservation Association and the Lancaster Stream Bank Fencing Work Group believe that the Donegal Springs Creek is an excellent location to highlight the importance of stream management. The creek has the potential to once again support a good trout fishery.

Directions to site: From Route 283 go west unto 772 at the Manheim/Mount Joy Exit. Go straight through the light in Mount Joy. Make the first right onto the Donegal Spring Road (the first road after the bridge). Make a left on Colebrook Road. Take the first right onto Donegal Spring Road. The meeting is at the one-room school on the right side.

For more information, contact Tom Moore, coordinator for Donegal Fish and Conservation Association, day (717) 291-6106 and evening (717) 653-5278; Mark Metzler/Travis Martin, Lancaster Conservation District, (717) 299-5361; or Lamonte Garber, Lancaster Stream Bank Fencing Work Group, (717) 234-5550.

Cover Crops, Soil Quality Topic Of Field Day

MILLHEIM (Centre Co.)— Half of the seven-acre market garden owned by Anne and Eric Nordell of Beech Grove Farm in Trout Run is used for cover crops each year to control weeds, restore soil condition, and amplify the effect of the limited supply of compost. The Nordells are attempting a "bio-intensive" approach to vegetable production by substituting land and live horse power for hired labor and off-farm inputs.

As part of an on-going On-Farm Demonstration project sponsored by the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture (PASA), the Nordells are involved in a four-year soil quality trial to evaluate the best ways to integrate cover crops, compost and horse-drawn cultivation into their 12-field rotation. The cover crops utilized include sweet clover, mammoth red clover, New Zealand white clover, berseem clover, hairy vetch, rye, oats, annual ryegrass and spring field peas.

A Field Day scheduled for Wednesday, Oct. 12, from 1 p.m.–4 p.m., will feature a tour of market garden fields and cover crops and an address on monitoring soil quality by Dr. Marianne Sarrantonio, coordinator, Soil Health Initiative, Rodale Institute Research Center.

Also included will be information on low-cost alternative tillage implements, hog-composted horse manure, sloped hi-tensile deer fence, portable season extenders, and their wood-fired bottom-heated greenhouse bench.

The PASA on-farm demonstration program was started in 1992 in order to demonstrate sustainable farming systems and practices that help make farming operations economically and ecologically sustainable. These demonstrations are farmer-initiated and supported by PASA with technical and financial resources. They are not research plots—rather, demonstrations of a practice or system that is working on a given operation under certain conditions. The common goal among all PASA demos is to share farmer-generated information between farmers in order to encourage understandings of various sustainable agriculture concepts which can then be implemented on individual farms.

For more information on this or other PASA-sponsored Field Days, please contact the PASA office at 114 West Main Street, P.O. Box 419, Millheim, PA 16854, (814) 349-9856.

JAMESWAY DIRECT XPRESS SYSTEM

NEW BELT FEEDERS & CONVEYORS

Big Capacity Delivery .. With All The Advantages Of Dependable, Efficient, Low Profile Direct Drive Design!

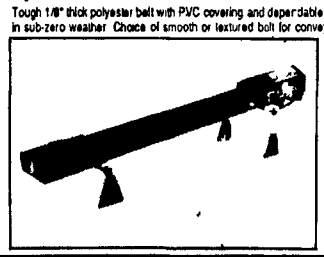
That's what farmers really appreciate about the new Jamesway family of Direct XPress Feeders and Conveyors. All models feature a dependable and efficient heavy duty industrial drive with an closed oil bath and standard 1 2 or 3 H P C faced motors. Our direct drive design eliminates pulleys jackshafts sprockets chains V belts and shields. The low profile motor and drive can be mounted on either side for added installation versatility.

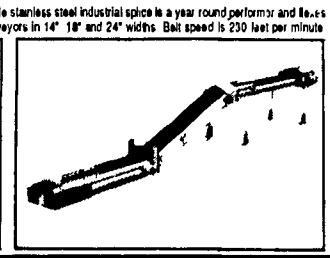
The Direct XPress family includes
- DXF 1400 Single or Divided Lot 14" Wide Belt Feeder 180 Maximum Length
- DXC 1400 - 14" Wide Belt Conveyor 180 Maximum Length
- DXC 1800 18" Wide Belt Conveyor 180 Maximum Length
- DXC 2400 24" - Wide Belt Conveyor 124 Maximum Length

X" Sides Are Standard
All Direct XPress System models feature heavy 16-gauge weather resistant galvanized steel sides in 2 1/2 5 and 10' sections. We call them "X" sides because they are "X tra" strong and will span 20' between supports. And they are built to last and will stay looking good "X tra" long!

Do It Your Way!
Match your feeding layout and requirements with reversible elevating conveyors inclines and declines without sacrificing capacity speed and uniform delivery. All inclines and declines are infinitely adjustable up to 30 degrees elevation for textured belt and up to 15 degrees elevation for smooth belt.

Tough 1/8" thick polyester belt with PVC covering and dependable stainless steel industrial splice is a year round performer and flexes in sub-zero weather. Choice of smooth or textured belt for conveyors in 14" 18" and 24" widths. Belt speed is 230 feet per minute.





YOU JUST CAN'T MATCH OUR MIX

CONSIDER THE MANY CONCRETE ADVANTAGES!

"A GOOD JULY RAIN GROWS A LOT OF GRAIN!"

With The Prospect Of A Good Corn Crop, It's Time For Many Producers To Make Decisions Concerning Storage.

about 10,000 bu. cap.
Shelled Corn
Poured Concrete
No Used Silos!
No Rebuilt Silos!
No Preowned Silos!!

In order to avoid hauling and drying costs, let us build a corn storage unit to preserve your valuable grain at 20%-30% moisture.

To keep your stored corn bright and yellow, you must protect it from oxygen and heat. Our 6" thick concrete walls reflect 38% of light beams, resulting in 780 times more heat-resisting ability than steel, and 25 times more insulating power than steel.

Our 6" thick walls have a very low leak potential compared to pre-fab silos of any kind, and a very low maintenance requirement.

BEFORE SPENDING A LOT OF MONEY FOR ENERGY TO DRY YOUR CORN, YOU WILL DO WELL TO CONSIDER THE MANY ADVANTAGES OF OUR POURED CONCRETE SILOS...

To unload your corn, we can install the simple auger system, the Laidig 43 unloader, or the Flying Dutchman. Let's discuss the options, and what is best for your situation.

BARN CLEANERS

Built to clean faster... built to last longer!

All-forged Hook-Link® chain... available on Super 300 and Super 500 barn cleaners

Extra thick steel at all wear points

IMPORTANT: Look for the "parting line" on any barn cleaner chain you buy. It shows where excess metal has been trimmed off. It is your assurance that the link was totally forged, not just punched out of a flat steel bar with grain flow in one direction only.
You want a totally-forged link because forging changes the grain on the steel, causing it to curve in unbroken flow lines around the contours of the link, giving the link greater strength to serve you longer.

Cost of electricity @ .08 kW for 12 000 lbs milk/day for 10 years	$17 550	$22 850
Total operating cost for ten years	$48 550	$50 850

LLAMAS LLAMAS LLAMAS

If you've been considering starting in llamas, or having a llama for a pet, why not stop in to see our herd.

Our young males start at $500, our weanling females at $2,500, our pregnant females at $3,500. A deposit will hold any of our crias (baby llamas) for you.

We prefer selling off the farm, rather than subjecting our animals to the stress of auctions.

All of our llamas are registered with the International Llama Registry. Some of the finest wool and blood lines can be found in our herd, including Otter Creek Harold.

All llamas can be halter led, and are gently trained by teenagers.

FREDERICK, Md. — Severe winds, rain, and even power outages couldn't dampen the enthusiasm at the Frederick County 4-H 1994 Showcase of Champions beef, sheep, and swine sale held recently at the campgrounds. The event is part of the Great Frederick Fair, and drew a crowd of several hundred avid supporters of the youth program.

Swine were the first order of business. F & M Bank showed its support by purchasing 18-year-old Kevin Donelly's two-hundred-thirty-four pound grand champion crossbred market barrow for $6.75 per pound, then donating it back for resale to the Frederick County 4-H Activity Center. Kevin is a member of the Sabillasville 4-H club.

Reserve grand champion market hog, owned by Middletown 4-H'er Shawn Leatherman, brought $2.50 per pound. The Hampshire weighed in at two-hundred-thirty-seven pounds. The buyer was Tom Walker, owner of Horseland, USA, Inc.

Wolfe Industrial Auctioneers, Inc. of Gettysburg, PA, sponsored the "Wolfe Pig". Jamie Hertel, a twelve-year-old, five year member of the Rocky Ridge Progressives 4-H club, owned the two-hundred-fifty pound pig that was selected as the fundraiser. Concrete General guaranteed a price of $1.00 per pound; anything under that and they would bring up the price to a minimum of $250.00. Bidding climaxed at $8.00 per pound. Top bidder was Ceresville Ford-New Holland, a generous supporter at both the County and State levels. The funds raised by the sale of this hog will go directly to the 4-H Livestock judging program.

This is the last year of 4-H for Rose Hill member Dente Brashear Jr., who had the grand champion market sheep. His one-hundred-seventeen pound Suffolk wether brought a record setting $30.00 per pound in an exciting bidding war. All proceeds from the sale of this sheep will be donated to the Frederick County Cancer Society.

Robert Dinsmore, a member of the Tri-Valley Livestock Club, also acknowledged his final year of 4-H with the sale of his reserve grand champion market sheep, a Hampshire. The one-hundred-seventeen pound sheep was purchased by Ceresville Ford-New Holland for $13.75 per pound.

A one-hundred-eight pound lamb sponsored by the Jim Miller family was designated as a special fundraiser in the market sheep sale. $2.50 per pound was guaranteed by the family, with all proceeds going to support the Frederick County Therapeutic Riding Program. Concrete General was the buyer, paying $6.20 per pound.

Grand champion in the Beef sale was Karla Davis' Cross Bred 1110 pound steer, "Buddy", which was purchased by Giant Food for $6.25 per pound. Reserve grand champion was another Cross Bred, a 1210 pound one raised by Kim Stup, a sixteen-year-old member of the Rocky Ridge Progressives. Kim's steer, bought by Frederick Underwriters, brought $5.00 per pound.

Other beef champions commanded respectable figures as well. Laura Keilholtz, another member of the Rocky Ridge Progressives, had the Champion shorthorn, purchased for $1.25 per pound for 1255 pounds by FCNB Bank. The reserve champion shorthorn, a 1235 pound project of eleven-year-old Jason Savage, brought a winning bid of $1.15 per pound from Horizon Concrete Company, of Hagerstown.

The champion Angus, a homebred 1100 pounder raised by ten-year-old Jefferson co-ed 4-H'er Sara Axline, brought $1.70 per pound from Concrete General. Reserve champion Angus, owned by Daryl Albright of the Rocky Ridge Progressives, raised $1.65 per pound in a bid by Custom Printing. The steer weighed 1195 pounds.

Ten-year-old Jessica Cline, from the Jefferson Co-eds, auctioned her 1150 Hereford champion off to FCNB for a winning bid of $1.65 per pound. Brad Stevens, an eleven-year-old Johnsville 4-H club member, had the reserve champion Hereford, 1225 pounds, which brought $1.25 per pound, and, in a generous token of support was donated back to the 4-H Camp Center.

E.B. Moser Concrete, Inc. sponsored Josh Ruby's 1245 pound Cross Bred steer, guaranteeing a price per pound of $1.00. It was purchased by a group of buyers: FCNB Bank, Morgan and Keller, Bidle Brothers, Tate Chrysler Corporation, Frederick Underwriters, and Concrete General. The buyers went together to purchase the steer for $12.05 per pound, then seventeen other buyers chipped in an additional 10 cents per pound over and above the price. All proceeds are earmarked for the Beef, Sheep, and Swine Club. The buyers then donated the steer back to Hospice of Frederick County for resale.

All resales of animals will take place Monday night at the regular Frederick Livestock Auction.

Officers of the Beef, Sheep, and Swine Club for 1994 are: Kim Stup - president, Dennis Willard - vice president; Missy Willard - secretary, Arin Axline - treasurer, and Abigail Sowers - reporter. Chairman of the Sales committee was Edward L. Wachter.

Auctioneers for the evening included Bob Meunier for Swine, Jay Ruby for Sheep, and Bob Hooper selling the Beef. Denny Remsburg was show ring announcer for the event.

Soil Quality Field Day Set

TROUT RUN (Lycoming Co.) — Not a dime for herbicides and a minimal amount of hand-weeding to raise six acres of vegetables? By focusing on soil health with the use of cover crops, tillage, and crop rotations, Anne and Eric Nordell maintain weed pressure at very low levels.

The Nordells will be hosting a field day on Wednesday, October 12, from 1 p.m. - 4 p.m. The field day will feature slides to provide an overview of the cultural practices used throughout the season and a walk through the fields to view the cover crops. Marianne Sarrantonio, from the Rodale Institute, will also discuss the topic of monitoring soil quality.

The Nordells are using a "bio-extensive" approach to sustainable vegetable production by substituting land and live horsepower for hired labor and off-farm inputs. They devote half of their market garden to cover crops each year to control weeds, restore soil condition, and amplify the effect of a limited supply of compost.

The cover crops utilized include sweet clover, mammoth red clover, New Zealand white clover, berseem clover, hairy vetch, rye, oats, annual ryegrass and spring field peas.

As part of the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture's (PASA) ongoing on-farm demonstration project, the Nordells are involved in a four-year soil quality trial to evaluate the best ways to integrate cover crops, compost, and horse-drawn cultivation into their twelve field rotation.

For additional information about the Nordell Field Day, contact the PASA office at (814) 349-9856 or the Nordells at (717) 634-3197.

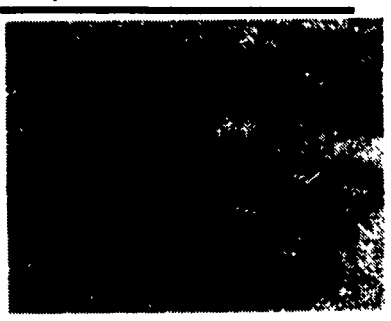
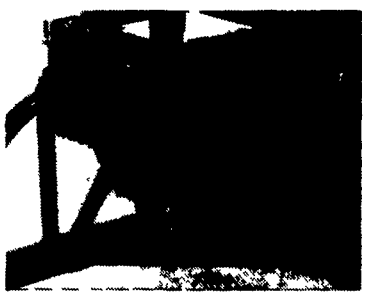
13'10" Culti-Mulcher In Stock At Binkley & Hurst Bros. Now!

Binkley & Hurst Bros., Inc. Has A Culti-Mulcher With Quality Features



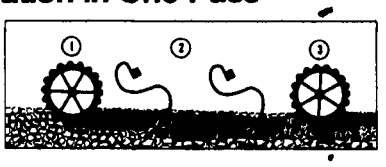


Weight Transfer is needed on some fields for best mulching results. Unique Farmhand system allows weight to be distributed between the front and rear rollers and the draw bar as needed.

Bearings on torsion-mounted hangers and roller tool bars combine with split roller axles to isolate shock loads. Up to 12 triple-lip sealed, self-aligning ball bearings are used on the main frame of each machine.

Complete Seedbed Preparation in One Pass

Here is how Farmhand Mulchers prepare perfect seedbeds in a single pass. (1) Surface clods are crushed into small particles by the front rollers. (2) Buried clods are then brought to the surface by two rows of looped "C" tines or Danish vibrating tines. (3) The rear set of rollers crumbles these clods, firms the seedbed, presses out the air pockets and leaves a fine seedbed for planting.



Mulching Makes You Money

Mulching your soil gives you better yields in two ways. First, loosely packed seedbeds with many clods allow moisture to evaporate quickly through the air pockets. Lost moisture reduces the speed of germination and gives your crops a less efficient start. Mulching creates a finer, clod-free seedbed with few air pockets and gives your crop a uniform start throughout the field. Moisture rises at just the right rate from the water table below to the seedbed.

Secondly, the small roots of sprouting seeds need a ready supply of soil nutrients. Feeder root systems of small plants in poorly prepared seedbeds cannot break through the clods and reach out for nourishment. Mulched soil allows the feeder roots to reach out in all directions. Thus, nourishment flows through the roots to build strong, fast-growing plants that give you better yields.

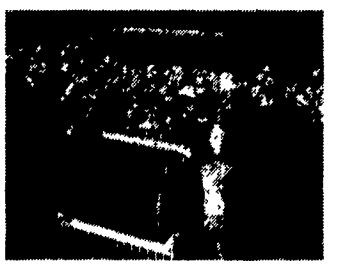
REMOVE ROCKS BEFORE FALL SEEDING

We Have 2 Models 6000 Rock Pickers Ready To Work
1 Hyd. and 1 PTO Unit



Grated Hopper Bottom
We use spring steel straps in the hopper instead of using milder steel The hopper is engineered to bounce back in shape

Hydraulic Drive
The most popular drive on rock pickers is hydraulic which is standard on the 6000 We have incorporated a relief valve to take away the shock when disengaging the drive.

Flotation Tires
The 16.5Lx16.1 flotation tires are standard equipment and are a must to reduce soil compaction

Reel Assembly
We are using the same reel as the proven Super Picker 6800 The three paddle reel has a large diameter, hard surfaced teeth and heavy duty paddles

Swing Pole
The manual swing pole is easy to maneuver in both working or transport position

Solid Shaft Grill Tines with Replaceable Grill Tips.
This modern grill is easier to maintain, has longer life giving you less down time The unique grill provides five feet of clean sifting and virtually jamless performance may be all the picker you'll need!

There's nothing more important to a crop than early even emergence. To get it, you need accurate, even seeding.

The 5300 has earned a reputation for its seeding precision, a funciton of its exclusive feed cup design and dependable disk openers. And, to improve placement of seed, the opener drawbars are heavier than on previous models. Press wheels and opener bearings are heavier for long life operation.

Along with accuracy, the 5300 gives you fast, high capacity seeding, so you spend less time refilling hoppers. Grass seeding attachment for 16x7.

Model 1680 PIT PAL®

AGITATES — PIT PAL's heavy duty pump has the power to agitate a pit, mixing those heavy bottom solids into a pumpable slurry.

CHOPS — PIT PAL'S unique intake-port design provides constant chopping action — up to 5,000 'shearing action' cuts per minute. This cutting action guarantees that straw and fiberous material will be chopped into a pumpable form.

PUMPS — PIT PAL'S handy gate valve permits agitating and/or pumping of 'under-barn' or outdoor manure pits. PIT PAL is portable, giving you the flexibility to use it in many locations.

LOADS — Load your slurry wagon by combining your PIT PAL to force feed a vacuum tank or over the top with a load stand.

PRIMES — PIT PAL will operate as a priming system for your high pressure irrigation pump.

JOHN DEERE BALERS DELIVER CONSISTENCY, CONSISTENTLY

Building "suare-er," stackable, solids bales is what our proven hay control system is all about.

Once hay is inside the baler, a continuous-flow, floating auger moves the crop into a tapered chamber...precompressing the hay before it reaches the bale chamber. This makes John Deere bales denser, and more consistent. A difference you'll notice when stacking and feeding bale after John Deere bale.

John and Christine Fron

Frontastic Holsteins

Jermvn, Pa

This picturesque dairy in north eastern Penna. started in 1930 during the depth of the depression by John's grandfather and dad Charlie "we had two horses and one cow and had to buy hay that year" says Charlie...

... Today John, Christine and Charlie work together as a team to make milk and improve genetics of the herd.

John started feeding Purina Test Cow 20% complete in 8/92. In the fall of 1993 John added Purina Super EXT Complete 20% to his feeding program. Cows consume 25# corn silage. 25# MML haylage .7# drv hay. milking ration is fed according to production with 33# as a max. Purina Dairy Freshener PAK is top dressed 10 days prior to calving thru 60 days.

John says "production has increased nicely, and we appreciate the service from Purina's mill and staff at Wyalusing, Pa."

Know Farm's 'Microenvironment,' Says Corn Grower President

If looking at the corn crops is any indication, it could be a banner year. At the Raymond Rinker farm in Upper Fairfield Township, near Montoursville, corn measures about 13 feet tall. At the Lycoming Mall farm, corn measures 14 feet tall, with ears on the stalk about head-high.

MONTOURSVILLE (Lycoming Co.) — "You have to know the microenvironment of every place you farm in order to be able to make an intelligent choice in seed corn selection," said Curt Rakestraw, newly elected president of the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association, Inc.

During an interview early last month with Lancaster Farming, Rakestraw toured several of the 31 different farm sites he rents in the farm valley north of North White Deer Ridge. At one Penn State research test plot (one of several early to medium season plots statewide) on land leased from Joe Youman's Farm in Fairfield Township, Rakestraw spoke about some of the important factors growers should consider when picking a variety.

Rakestraw farms about 1,100 acres of crops (700 acres in corn, 150 acres in small grain, and 150 acres in hay) with his brother Dave. Curt said that a farmer must know the qualities of the soil and the environment as a whole.

"We have some clay and rock," he said. "They say this is where the glaciers did their most damage. The edge of the glacer was right here. So we get a little bit of everything around here."

Rakestraw said a lot of the land he rents to grow corn has a lot of different varieties of soil, ranging from a Hagerstown silt loam to shaley loam to red clay. At one farm near the Lycoming Mall, he said "we were told there were 17 different soil types in three of the strips," he said. "And I believe it. When you plow it, it just changes every hundred feet or so.

SOIL QUALITY AND CORN PRODUCTION

A few years ago, the term "soil quality" became fashionable. As with most fashionable items, I resisted using it initially. But the more I visit corn fields around Pennsylvania, the more I see a need for us to think about soil quality and how we can maintain it in our production systems.

What are the symptoms of a soil that is lacking in quality? Soil scientists tell us that this would be a soil that is lacking in properties that are essential for it to perform well. This could include factors such as fertility, biological activity, organic matter, or physical properties.

As a corn specialist, my perception of soils that are lacking in quality are those where corn grows less vigorously than others, where water appears to run off rather than infiltrate, appear to have few earthworms, and those where the corn is the first to show signs of drought. For the most part, these problems are related to physical and biological problems in the soil rather than soil fertility issues.

We have known for a long time that certain practices can contribute to a degradation of the soil. It is well docu-

Pa. Crops Conference Slated For January

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — A new crop production conference which brings together corn, soybean, and forage crop producers will be held January 16-17, 1995 here at the Embers Inn and Convention Center.

This conference will be cosponsored by the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association, the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council, and the Mid Atlantic Soybean Association.

The conference will focus on technologies essential to crop producers in the state. This marks the first time a joint conference of this magnitude has been held in the state.

Keith Eckel, president of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, is scheduled as the keynote speaker on the first day of the conference. He will discuss Pennsylvania Agriculture in the year 2010 and the adjustments necessary to be part of the industry then.

The keynote speaker for the second day of the conference will be John Holt, a farm management professor from the University of Florida. John is a widely recognized and entertaining speaker on farm management issues. He will address "Getting the Most Out of Your Employees" and "Getting the Most Out of Your Management" in two presentations.

The conference will also include a variety of breakout

Know Farm's 'Microenvironment,' Says Corn Grower President

"We've got prime riverbottom ground, silty soil, to thin, shale soils in the hills. We got everything."

The Youman farm is one of six different Penn State early to medium season corn variety test plots. The plot helps to examine the effect a certain soil type in a certain climate has on a variety. Research examines germination, standability, yield, harvestability, and drydown.

It is all those factors taken as an average — and how consistent those factors are from site to site — that Rakestraw examines carefully before choosing a variety.

"That's one of the things that's fun about choosing the right kind of corn. It's a challenge — not only in different soils, but every year is different weather-wise."

Rakestraw said that, on the results of the plots, what they found is that "what works this year doesn't necessarily work next year." It is important that growers listen carefully to the claims of the seed sales representatives and measure those claims against hard performance data.

Rakestraw looked back over the years and detailed how the weather affected his crop. In 1987-1988, it was hot and dry early, but rains in mid-July boosted yield. In 1989, the weather conditions were ideal until mid-summer, when cool, gray days prevailed, adversely affecting kernel formation. In 1991, when many growers experienced a drought in the state, timely thundershowers arrived and provided Rakstraw, in some areas, with 170-bushel per acre yield.

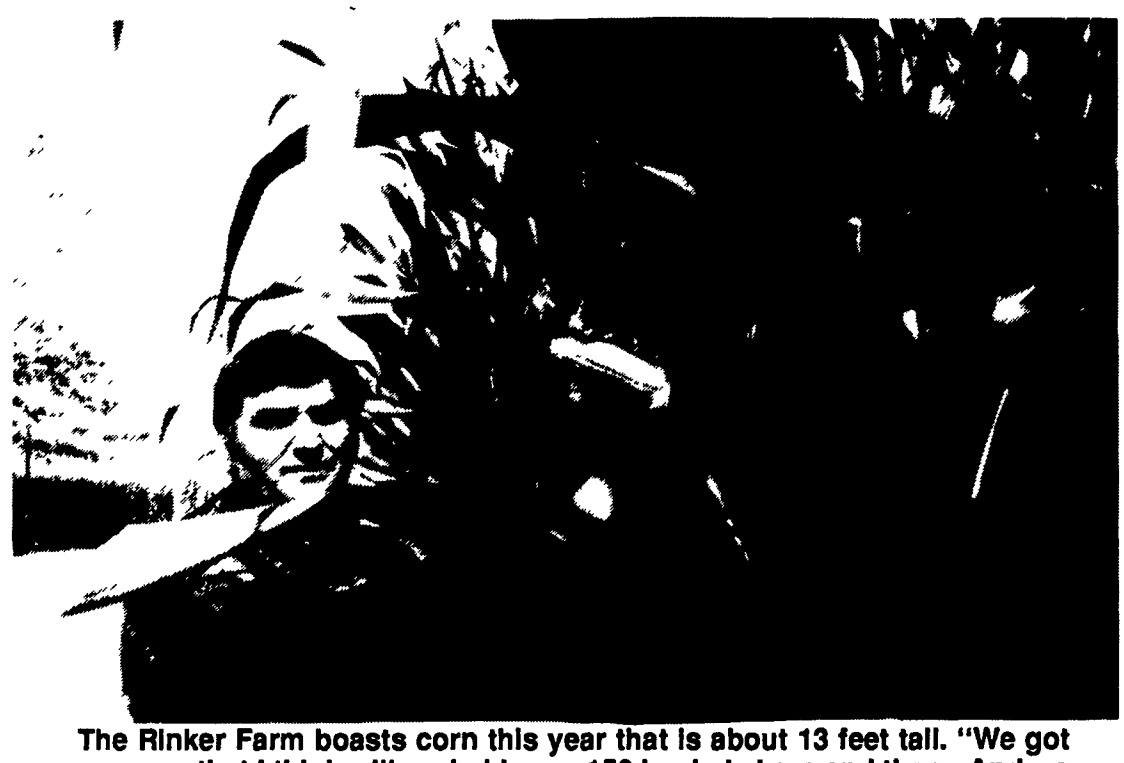
'We have some clay and rock,' he said. 'They say this is where the glaciers did their most damage. The edge of the glacer was right here. So we get a little bit of everything around here.'

In 1992, one of the worst year he has ever seen, it was too cold and wet. Last year the weather dried out, decreasing the yield.

Rakestraw remembers a farmer telling him once that "You'll never see two years in a row exactly the same or very close to the same," he said.

At the time of the interview, the milk line was forming as a great deal of the corn approached dent stage. Last year, the top yield was about 90 bushels per acre. This year, he expects about 120-130 bushels per acre.

"We got some corn that I think will probably run 150 bushels here and there. And we got some on the other end of the scale — it depends on how it shells out.



The Rinker Farm boasts corn this year that is about 13 feet tall. "We got some corn that I think will probably run 150 bushels here and there. And we got some on the other end of the scale — it depends on how it shells out," said Rakestraw.

During a recent interview with Lancaster Farming, Rakestraw toured several of the 31 different farm sites he rents in the farm valley north of North White Deer Ridge. He keeps careful records regarding tillage, planting, and harvesting on all the sites.

Rakestraw, who expects to handle about 80,000-90,000 bushels in his grain elevators this year, said that as president, he will do more to utilize the resources of the National Corn Growers Association and to join them in their lobbying efforts to improve the market for all state corn growers.

Curt Rakestraw, who farms about 1,100 acres of crops (700 acres in corn, 150 acres in small grain, and 150 acres in hay) with his brother Dave, said that a farmer must know the qualities of the soil and the environment as a whole.

At the Rinker farm in Upper Fairfield Township, near Montoursville, corn measures about 13 feet tall. At the Lycoming Mall farm, corn measures 14 feet tall, with ears on the stalk about head-high.

'We were told there were 17 different soil types in three of the strips. And I believe it.'

But simply looking at the corn doesn't necessarily measure what kind of yield and what kind of harvest and drydown it will have.

"It's very, very difficult to judge a variety on looks unless you've grown it before and you know the characteristics," said Rakestraw. "There are so many cultural practices, it's real tough to put a finger on some of those things."

"If we get sunny, warm days, it will pack a lot of starch in there and make for a lot higher yield."

In mid-September, the weather was warming up sufficiently to produce, state- and countrywide, one of the best — if not the best — corn growing year. Rakestraw said he remains "cautiously optimistic.

It is important that growers listen carefully to the claims of the seed sales representatives and measure those claims against hard performance data.

"For us, our best crops have been in years where it started out dry and, by the end of June, you start getting a little more rainfall. By the middle of July or so, you get a couple more decent rains."

If looking at the corn crops is any indication, it could be a banner year. At the Raymond Growers should look for product consistency. He said growers should ask themselves, What corn do we put on this soil type on this property?

Know Farm's 'Microenvironment,'

In the years to come, growers will be faced with different types of corn to suit more specific types of needs. Roundup-ready corn is about six years away from availability. All the time, more variables in species selection will come into play — a farmer must think about options such as standability, yields, disease resistance, improved suitability to different tillage practices, and suitability to denser corn rows and population densities.

At the Raymond Rinker farm in Upper Fairfield Township, near Montoursville, corn measures about 13 feet tall. At the Lycoming Mall farm, corn measures 14 feet tall, with ears on the stalk about head-high.

"There's going to be more and more options," said Rakestraw. "It's not going to get easier in the future, it's going to get more difficult."

Rakestraw employs a variety of tillage methods on his farm, including no-till and conventional. He has found that compaction is reduced in several areas where he chisel plows in the fall.

Fertility management depends on soil tests and needs. He injects about 180 units of anhydrous ammonia in regular season and about 140 units in short season corn a few weeks prior to planting. He doesn't sidedress the corn because he has not seen much benefit to it — it's more important to have the nitrogen there right before the crop really needs it.

Rakestraw remembers a farmer telling him once that 'You'll never see two years in a row exactly the same or very close to the same.'

Rakestraw was elected president of the corn growers at their annual meeting at Ag Progress Days in August. Rakestraw served as president of the association from 1987-1988. In the past, he said the association was geared more toward production and disseminating information on production.

But growers in Pennsylvania aren't like the Midwest, which is corn and only corn, and the sale of corn as primarily a cash crop. Midwest growers worry about prices and have time to read and lobby for better prices. The growers in Pennsylvania care mostly about obtaining a crop sufficient enough to feed livestock.

Rakestraw, who expects to handle about 80,000-90,000 bushels in his grain elevators this year, said that as president, he will do more to utilize the resources of the National Corn Growers Association and to join them in their lobbying efforts to improve the market for all state corn growers.

Effect Of Starter Fertilizer On Corn

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — In high fertility soils, it is common to see a visual response to starter fertilizer in the spring that is not accompanied by a yield response.

A recent University of Illinois study examined the growth patterns of corn planted with and without a starter fertilizer to try to explain why enhanced early season growth does not result in a yield response. The results of the study, conducted by Donald Bullock and his colleagues, was published recently in Crop Science.

In this study, corn was planted in a high phosphorous testing soil in both 1990 and 1991. One half of the plots received 11.5 gallons per acre of an ammonium polyphosphate that supplied 13-47-0 per acre. The other plots received no starter fertilizer. The hybrid used in this study was Pioneer brand 3379. The authors sampled the corn plants in each treatment 18-20 times each year to monitor growth and development.

Corn in the starter fertilized plots showed a 16-20 percent increase in plant dry weight early in the season compared to the corn where no starter was used. Plant dry weight at harvest and grain yield were not affected by the starter fertilizer in either year, however.

Leaf area measurements showed that the starter fertilizer plots had higher leaf area until silking. Shortly after silking, however, the leaf area of the non-starter plots surpassed the starter plots. It was also noted that the starter fertilizer treated plants reached silking and black layer about 2 to 3 days before the untreated plants and were about 1 percent lower in moisture at harvest.

The authors conclude that starter fertilizer treated plants developed faster early in the season but that this did not result in larger leaf area during the grain fill period. The starter fertilizer apparently hastened the plants development and maturity enough to offset the advantage from the faster early season growth.

These results appear to be consistent with observations from studies in Pennsylvania. On high phosphorous testing soils, Penn State researchers frequently see a visual response to starter and sometimes a reduction in grain moisture, but often no yield benefit. On low to optimum phosphorous soils, however, starter shows a fairly consistent yield response, particularly on early planted corn.

The maturity effect of starter fertilizer is also important in Pennsylvania's short season areas where crop maturity can be a problem.

Tassels That Think They Are Ears!

Robert Nielsen
Extension Corn Agronomist
Purdue University

If there were circuses for corn plants, one of the freak sideshows might be the "A-maize-ing" Half-Man, Half-Woman Tassel!

Ears where tassels should be or tassels that exhibit partial ears in addition to tassel branches always occur somewhere every year, and this year is no exception. Should tassel-ears be surprising? What causes tassel-ears?

Where are tassel-ears most frequently found? Are they symptomatic of other problems in the plants?

While a tassel-ear is indeed an odd sight, its occurrence is simply a reminder that the flowers of the corn plant have the physiological capability to be perfect (male and female flowers in the same floral organ). Most of the time, the plant's hormonal activity dictates that tassels develop male flowers exclusively. Certain situations alter the hormonal control such that female flowers (ovules or potential kernels) develop as well as male flowers (the pollen-containing anthers).

Tassel-ears most often occur on tillers (suckers) and rarely on main stalks. The occurrence of tassel-ears, therefore, merely reflects the presence of tillers in a field. The occurrence of tillers usually does not signal the presence of other problems in the field. On the contrary, tiller production is usually the result of favorable growing conditions during early vegetative growth and development.

Tillers seem to be favored by low plant populations and ample soil moisture, nutrients, and sunlight intensities. Hybrids also vary to some degree in their propensity for developing tillers. Tillers also form from plants whose main stalk has been severely damaged early in the season (such as the late June frost of 1992).

The bottom line? Tassel-ears are an oddity, but nothing to get excited about.

What's New From USFGC On Exports

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Agricultural exports are important to the overall U.S. economy, generating economic activity, income and jobs. Each $1 billion in agricultural exports support an estimated 22,000 U.S. jobs in production, processing, packaging, transportation and related industries, reports the U.S. Feed Grains Council (USFGC).

In 1993, U.S. agricultural exports exceeded $42 billion, and the U.S. recorded its 34th straight surplus in agricultural trade, a surplus large enough to put agriculture in front of most other U.S. industry sectors in contributing positively to the nation's balance of trade, reports USFGC.

According to the U.S. Feed Grains Council, the top ten markets for U.S. exports of corn in 1993 were Japan, Taiwan, Russia, Egypt, Canada, Algeria, Spain, Korea, Poland and the Ukraine. These countries imported about 1.7 billion bushels of U.S. corn in 1993.

Taiwan's feed grains imports in 1993 reached a record 228 million bushels compared to 221 million bushels in 1992 and 227 million bushels in 1991. The U.S. share of feed grain imports to Taiwan in 1993 reached 96 percent, or 207 million bushels, according to USFGC.

In addition, India's purchases of U.S. corn for feed jumped from approximately 42 million bushels in 1987 to more that 110 million bushels in 1993. A population of 900 million people and a rapidly growing middle-class are fueling demand and making this an attractive export market for U.S. corn producers.

The U.S. Feed Grains Council was organized in 1960 by producer groups and agribusiness firms. It is a private, non-profit organization that develops and expands export markets of U.S.-produced feed grain and co-products. The Council works through a network of 11 international offices in Latin America, Europe, the Middle East, Africa and Asia. The council's headquarters is located in Washington, D.C.

CORN REMAINS BIG ON DAIRY FARMS IN PENNSYLVANIA

Greg W. Roth
Penn State Agronomy
Assistant Professor

A recent survey has shed some interesting light on the cropping systems used by Pennsylvania dairy farmers.

The telephone survey of more than 1,200 dairy farms in the state was conducted by a group from the Department of Ag Economics and Rural Sociology at Penn State as part of the Dairy Profitability Project.

One aspect of the survey focused on cropping systems and showed that corn silage was grown by 77 percent of the dairies who participated in the survey. About 50 percent of the dairy farms grew corn for grain. This compares to 56 percent that grew alfalfa and 51 percent that reported growing grass hay. Oats were grown on 26 percent of the farms and soybeans on 12 percent.

More than 60 percent of those survey described their forage system as either grass hay, corn silage and alfalfa, corn silage and alfalfa, or grass hay and corn silage. About 10 percent reported con silage alone as their major forage system. About 29 percent of the dairy farmers indicated that pasture was the primary summer forage source. More than half of these farmers (56 percent) indicated that they were using rotational grazing.

The survey also addressed tillable acres and custom field work. About 48 percent of the operators reported having two acres or less per milking cow, while more than 20 percent had more than four acres per cow. On the average, operators had 3.1 acres/cow.

More than 47 percent of the survey respondents do not use custom fieldwork. Of those that do, custom harvesting was the most popular, used by nearly 75 percent, and custom fertilizer and chemical applications were used by nearly 58 percent.

Much more information on other aspects of Pennsylvania dairy farms is available in the report. The report (AE&RS #245) should be available through local extension offices.

Corn For Grain More Than Last Year

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Based on September 1 conditions, Pennsylvania's 1994 production of corn for grain and Type 32 tobacco are expected to be more than last year. Type 41 tobacco production is expected to be less than last year, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service.

Yield of corn for grain is expected to be 116 bushels, up 20 bushels from last year. Acreage for harvest is estimated at 1,000,000. Production is expected to be 116.0 million bushels, 25 percent more than last year. Production of Pennsylvania seedleaf-type tobacco by the commonwealth's farmers is forecast at 7.02 million pounds, 6 percent more than last year. The expected yield of 1,950 pounds per acre will be harvested from 3,600 acres.

At the United States' level, corn for grain production is forecast at 9.26 billion bushels, up fractionally from the August 1 forecast but 46 percent above the 1993 crop. Acres for harvest is expected to be 71.8 million with an average yield of 129.0 bushels per acre. All tobacco production is forecast at 1.54 billion pounds, 4 percent below last year. Indicated acres for harvest are 676,120 with an average yield of 2,280 pounds per acre.

PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOCIATION

President's Message

Curt Rakestraw
President, PMCGA

I don't know about you, but fall is my favorite time of the year. The weather is pleasant with warm days and cool nights. The fall foliage brightens the landscapes but, most importantly for us corn growers, it's harvest time.

If your operation is anything like ours, this year's corn harvest also marks the beginning of the planning stage for next year. As we harvest the crop, we are also analyzing what hybrids we'll continue to plant and which ones we'll discard, which herbicides performed best, and which tillage methods worked best, along with a whole host of other things.

I think two of the things that farmers enjoy most about farming are: 1) being able to actually see a physical product that they have produced and have the satisfaction of knowing they were responsible for doing their part in feeding the world, and 2) always having the challenge of trying to do better next year whether you're producing corn, milk, hay, or any other farm commodity. This is why harvest time is so enjoyable to me.

When you look at the crop that you've produced with a certain degree of satisfaction, you're already trying to figure what you can do better next year to grow an even bigger crop.

Planning is one of the most important aspects of farming today. You've probably all heard that farmers are the only group that buys retail and sells wholesale. Because farmers can't pass their increased costs on to the consumer, we need to produce our product more efficiently each year. As farmers, we need to gather all the information available in order to make the best possible decision each year.

If you are a corn grower in Pennsylvania, the PMCGA can provide you with some valuable information that will help you in your operation. If you belong to our organization, you will receive the Penn State corn yield results in the four maturity groups. You will also receive the results of the state and national corn yields contest which include the agronomic practices of the winners. The NCGA also mails out a bi-monthly newsletter which contains a great deal of information.

Unfortunately, there are a lot of Pennsylvania corn growers who are not members of the PMCGA We would like to change that, and are willing to offer you an incentive to join. Our dues are $30 a year and $75 for three years. If you join now, you will receive a free bag of seed corn from a participating dealer of your choice. Dupont will also throw in $100 worth of Accent.

For those of you who are already members and renew for three years, you will receive a free bag of seed corn from a participating dealer of your choice.

As of early September, most of the corn in Pennsylvania looks good. The USDA August crop report reflects this with an estimated yield of 112 bushels per acre. With a little luck and the good Lord's help, you will have a big crop.

We at PMCGA wish you a safe and enjoyable harvest season.

Curtin R. Rakestraw
President, PMCGA

Narrow Row Corn Catches On In Mich.

Del Voight
Lebanon County
Cooperative Extension
Agent

During one of the Penn State crop production satellite conferences last year, an extension agent from Michigan who watched our segment on narrow row research called in to comment.

The agent, Steve Poindexter from Saginaw, Mich., indicated that they had done considerable research with narrow row corn and found changing to narrow rows to be a profitable alternative.

Furthermore, Steve indicated that many growers were adopting narrower (22-inch) row corn in the area.

To further assess this technology and the steps needed to adopt it in on-farm situations here in Pennsylvania, a small group of extension agents and specialists from Penn State recently traveled to Michigan to view narrow row equipment and discuss the transition to narrower rows with growers. I was part of that group.

We visited three growers from the "thumb" region in Michigan who had made the transition to narrow rows. The first grower we visited was Dick Gremel. Dick grows corn, soybeans, dry beans, and sugar beets. Dick's main motivation for going to narrow rows was increased profit. He modified a 4- and 6-row corn head to make an 8-row, 22-inch head. He believes that he gets about a 10-day quicker canopy on the 22-inch row corn and that the largest response to narrow rows occurs in stress years when plants are small.

One of the most surprising modifications we encountered on Dick's farm was his switch to 12.4-54 tires on his tractors. The narrow tires facilitate travel through the field when cultivating and, when used as duals, reduced the compaction problems for bean rows between the tires. Dick and the other growers reported few traction problems from the narrow tires but they sure make tractors look strange. Dick figures he spent $40,000 to gear up for the narrow rows.

According to Michigan State data, the benefits to a 750-acre dry bean/corn grower could total nearly $22,000 a year from the narrow rows. About $19,000 of this response is from the dry beans on 500 acres, however.

The next growers we visited were Bill and Jim Hereford. They also had recently made the conversion to narrower rows and had made most of the modifications to the corn head and planters in their own shop. They also harvest some corn for silage and invested in a Kemper drum harvester for silage harvesting. They estimate that this head cost they about $5,000 more than a conventional head, but expect to be able to recover that with increased yields. They also feel that the narrower row system works a bit better on poorer soils.

We also visited with Lee Dodak, corn grower who recently made his own 24-row, 22-inch planter, complete with all of the latest hydraulics and monitors. Lee can plant 30 acres an hour with this rig.

All of the growers we visited were growing hybrids in the 100-105 day range at population near 30,000 plants per acre. There appeared to be several key factors that has made this system work. First, they had sound agronomic research data that indicated a response to narrower rows. Next the growers made decisions based on careful economic analyses, which showed that the system was profitable for them. Most used a cropping system of corn, dry beans, and sugar beets in which each crop responded to the narrow rows and the equipment costs could be spread out over nearly all of their acres.

Finally, they have had the support of local implement dealers who were willing to help with the necessary modifications.

Will narrow rows work in Pennsylvania? That question remains to be answered. We are building our research database in Pennsylvania with a series of plots we're harvesting this fall and have more planned for next year. Once we have that information available, we'll be able to evaluate the economics on narrow row corn production for Pennsylvania.

Field Crops Less Than 15 Percent Of Cash Receipts

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — In recent years, field crops have accounted for approximately 99 percent of the field and vegetable crop acres harvested in Pennsylvania and about 97 percent of the value of these crops.

Corn for grain and silage, combined with all hay crops, has accounted for more than 80 percent of the value of field crops. Field crops make up less than 15 percent of cash receipts of Pennsylvania farmers. However, about two-thirds of these crops are marketed through livestock and livestock products in the state and indirectly contribute to cash receipts.

Based on current indicators, the costs of growing crops will continue to increase in the foreseeable future but not at the rate experienced in the past several years. Inflation will continue to add to both operating costs and new investment in machinery and crop facilities. Thus, if a profit is to be made with crops, farmers will need to compare alternative production methods carefully and follow sound production practices.

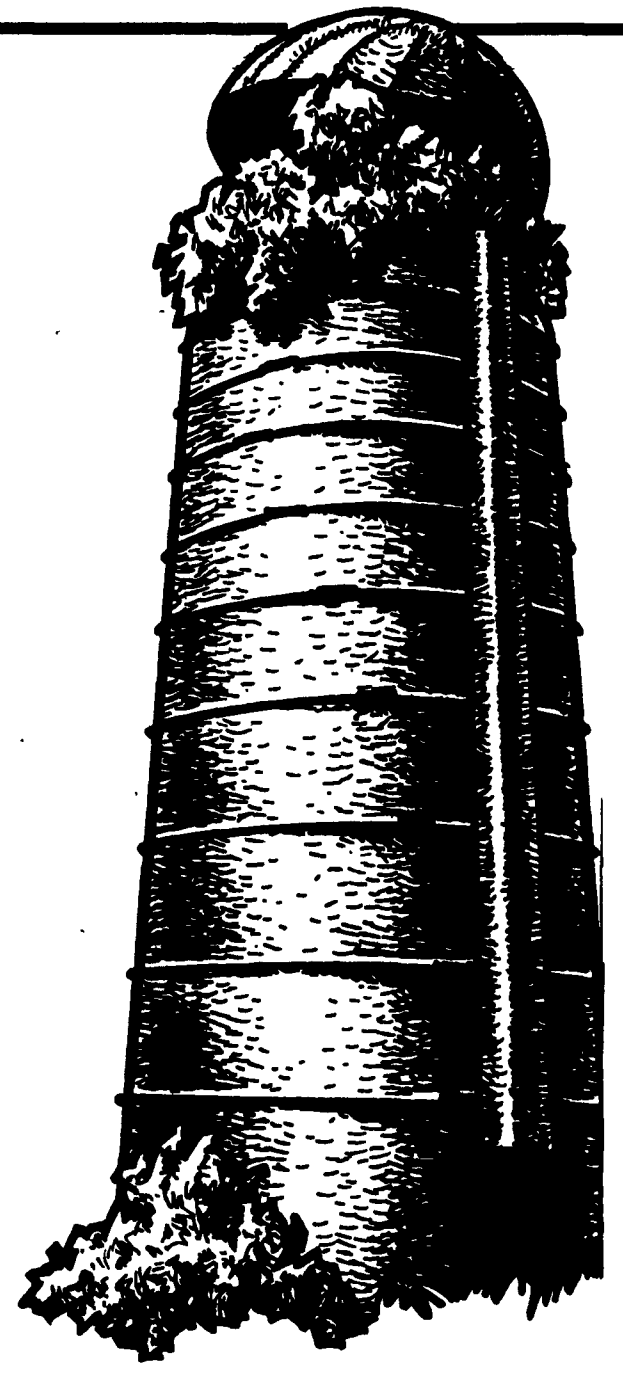
Extra tonnage isn't everything in a silage hybrid, but it's a good place to start!

Up till now, the problem with most silage hybrids is that they weren't developed for livestock feed. That's why seed companies talked about "dual purpose" hybrids or recommended that you plant a grain corn for silage.

Now, Mycogen Plant Sciences introduces it's TMF series of corn hybrids bred specifically and exclusively for silage production. And when you see them in the field, you'll know it!

For example, in 17 trials across 5 states in 1993, TMF 106 averaged 30% bigger yields of energy-rich silage than the average of all hybrids grown for silage in the counties where it was tested.



See For Yourself,
Plant A TMF Variety On Your Farm!

Alternative Designs For Hybrid Strip Tests

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Hybrid strip trials are usually conducted in one of two designs. One is a non replicated strip with individual hybrids laid out in adjacent strips. Another method is a tester design that involves a tester hybrid to be placed between every second or third hybrid in the trial.

In this design, hybrid yields are adjusted based on the yields of the adjacent tester strips. Comparisons between hybrids are then made on the basis of adjusted yields. The purpose of this procedure is to adjust for variation that might be encountered across the field.

A recent article published in the July 1992 issue of the Journal of Production Agriculture by M. A. Schmitt of the University of Minnesota and S.J. Openshaw and M. W. Davis of Pioneer Hi-bred International examined the relative benefits of the two designs. In the study, 19 large plot yield trials were conducted in Minnesota using five hybrids each. The authors used statistical techniques to estimate the variation encountered with each design.

The authors found that in 14 of 19 trials, the use of the tester system actually increased the variation encountered in the test. In most cases, the adjustment using the testers did not increase the precision of the test. As a result, the use of testers to increase the confidence of performance data is usually unwarranted. The authors suggest that to increase the precision of on-farm testing, instead of going to a tester system, a second replication should be considered. Replication could reduce the variation by one half and could be accomplished with little extra work compared to the tester system.

A top yielding hybrid, N4242 flowers early and dries down very fast to offer maximum return and profitability. It performs extremely well in either drought or cool wet growing seasons. Broad adaptability makes this a popular dual-purpose corn for grain or silage in northern Indiana, Ohio and early maturity areas of Pennsylvania. Superior stalk strength and ear retention. Works well with reduced tillage and continuous corn. Adapts to a wide range of soils and plant densities. Due to early maturity, N4242 is not generally recommended for dryland sandy soils of northwestern Indiana.

N5220 RM: 105-109

An exceptional dual-purpose hybrid for grain or silage, N5220 displays good standability for top yields. Early denting and extremely fast drydown help this newer hybrid deliver very heavy test weight, high quality grain throughout northern Indiana and Ohio, plus medium-early maturity areas of Pennsylvania. Attractive, healthy plants are best adapted for moderate to high densities on medium to fine textured soils. Responds well to crop rotations.

N6822 RM: 110-114

An outstanding newer hybrid for the Eastern Corn Belt, N6822 displays very good staygreen to maintain high yield potential under continuous corn or standard rotations. Performs well on medium to fine textured soils when planted at moderate to high densities. Semi-flex ears produce good quality, heavy test weight grain. Very good standability and drought tolerance protect yield potential.

NEW S 39-41

(X9339) RM: Late Group III

Achieving a new level of Phytophthora root rot protection, this high yielding variety is resistant to all races found throughout our area (from 1 to 11). New S 39-41 features the Rps1-k gene, which makes it resistant to all prevalent races. With excellent emergence, it is a superior choice for no-till drilling. Very good standability and stress tolerance promote optimum yields. It shows higher protein levels, too. Adapts to all row widths. Similar maturity to S 39-11 and Williams 82. PVP

Top Notch Entertainment Makes Classic

PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Louise Mandrell and Lee Greenwood have been named to take center stage for a toe tappin' Evening of Entertainment at the National Corn Growers Association's (NCGA) Corn Classic.

More than 2,000 of the nation's top growers and industry leaders will be gathering February 26–28 in Music City USA at the Nashville Convention Center to get in tune with the industry's top issues.

The Evening of Entertainment, sponsored by Monsanto Company, is slated to conclude NCGA's 37th annual convention and trade show on Tuesday, February 28, from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. at Ryman Auditorium. Recently reopened after a $8.5 million renovation, Ryman Auditorium has earned its reputation as the "Carnegie Hall of the South."

Mandrell leaped into the national spotlight in the fall of 1980 as one of the talented siblings on the NBC television show, Barbara Mandrell and the Mandrell Sisters. She began her career in high school when she became sister Barbara's full-time bass guitar player as one of the original "Do-Rite" band members. While still a teenager, she became a fixture on the Grand Ole Opry with the Stu Phillips Show. When barely out of her teens, she had become a well-respected Music City instrumentalist.

Louise Mandrell is one of the hottest tickets of the entertainment set. Her talent, personality and boundless energy have won her a legion of fans, unparalleled reviews, a string of hit records, a best-selling book, numerous commercial endorsements, her own nationally syndicated television special and a spectacular stage show.

Lee Greenwood's career stands as a shining example of an American success story. From his humble beginning on a farm near Sacramento, Calif., Lee has taken his natural talent and achieved worldwide recognition in the entertainment business. Honing his musical abilities on a number of instruments at an early age, he was already a seasoned touring performer by the time he had graduated from high school. He turned down a college music scholarship, abandoned a promising professional baseball career and even skipped his own high school graduation ceremony for musical career opportunities. Although the Nevada lounge circuit provided Lee invaluable experience, he finally got his break in Nashville writing and recording a demo session with Jerry Crutchfield for It Turns Me Inside Out.

His feel for country music, coupled with his electrifying performances, quickly established him as a major country artist. Only two years after his debut album, he was voted the Country Music Association's (CMA) Male Vocalist of the Year. The next year, he won that award again and also a Grammy for Best Country Vocalist of the Year. His first three albums achieved gold sales status and his Greatest Hits also went gold. In 1985, CMA awarded him Song of the Year honors for writing God Bless the USA.

Full Speed Ahead Toward Greater Profits

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Five Corn Utilization Conferences (CUC) in the past seven years have made tremendous progress toward selling more corn," said Gene Iannotti, technical coordinator of CUC V.

Sponsored by the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA), CUC V drew 340 scientists, administrators, and business people to discuss expansion of industrial uses of corn. They came from about 10 foreign countries, from federal offices, universities, corporations, private research institutions, and government laboratories.

Iannotti, associate professor of agricultural engineering at the University of Missouri-Columbia, adds that "since the first CUC in 1987, a number of products and processes have made it to the real world. Seven years is an extremely quick transition time from concept to reality," he says.

Polylactic acid (PLA) degradable products such as institutional serviceware (cold cups, lids, plates, straws, and utensils) and yard waste and grocery bags are one example. On the verge of commercialization, this corn-derived plastic is being developed as EcoPLATB by Cargill, Inc., said Jim Linde of Cargill. The company has the raw materials—corn-derived dextrose—and technology—fermentation—to develop the commercial utility of polylactic acid. It now has a 10-million-pound plant being "de-bugged", another 250-million-pound facility nearing readiness, and has filled more that 25 patents in the process, product and application areas. Future product target areas, says Linde, include personal care products, packaging, and agricultural films because EcoPLA can "equal or exceed existing products in both performance and value."

"This may become the next premier corn market," said Anthony Pometto, who chaired of one of the sessions at CUC V.

"Polylactic acid biodegradable products have the potential to become a 300 million bushel per year market for corn," said Pometto, who is associate professor in the Department of Food Science and Human Nutrition and the Center for Crops Utilization Research at Iowa State University.

A radical new corn processing technology which can increase yield and lower the cost of ethanol while creating new, high-value food products was also highlighted at CUC V.

Called SEP, sequential extraction processing, the new wet milling technology is being developed at the Center for Crops Utilization Research at Iowa State University in Ames.

"We want to reduce the stream of low-value feedstuffs, like corn gluten feed which is currently vulnerable to trade restrictions. Those products currently return as much as half the cost of corn," said Larry Johnson of the Center. "But, SEP can increase the value by creating a stream of high-value foods and industrial products."

SEP not only extracts zein and a food-grade protein concentrate called glutelin, it removes water from ethanol, eliminating a costly step in current wet milling.

Zein, currently worth $9 per pound, is widely used in the confectionery and pharmaceutical industries. Glutelin, which is very water soluble, could be used to produce high-protein beverages such as infant formulas as well as meat extenders and cheeses.

Kyd Brenner, president of the Corn Refiners association in Washington, D.C., concurs. "We don't have another ethanol or corn sweetener that will grow 20 percent per year on our plates, but we do have a whole plateful of products and processes that together may add up to another ethanol or sweetener."

Industrial markets, which already exceeded the export demand for corn, said Wally Hardie, farmer from Fairmount, N.D., and chairman of NCGA's Research and Commercialization Committee, "offers us a critical opportunity to not just sell our product—corn—but to price it at profitable levels.

"NCGA sponsors CUC V to see beyond the horizon of current products and to better develop a comprehensive research strategy. In both we need the skills of these experts. Together we can use our know-how to improve the quality of life and meet the tremendous and incessantly changing needs of the world," he said.

Pete Wenstrand, a farmer from Essex, Iowa and NCGA president, concluded, "CUC V is just what we need to capture the future." He noted that the conference carried out the recommendations of a recent strategic planning research project, Corn Vision 2020, cosponsored by NCGA and Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc.

"The Corn Vision 2020 panelists urged us to partner with every conceivable ally and to create new coalitions in order to hold our world lead in a global industry," said Wenstrand. "That's what it will take to become and remain price makers instead of price takers. And that's why we are working through CUC V and other projects to move the industrial utilization of corn full speed ahead."

POST-SILKING LOSSES OF N FROM CORN

Greg W. Roth
Assistant Professor

Penn State Studies that have shown that some N is lost following the early reproductive stages (silking to milk stage) of a corn crop. A recent article published in Agronomy Journal has carefully documented these losses. The research, conducted by D.D. Francis and others, used radioactive labeled N fertilizer to quantify the losses of N from corn plants late in the season. Losses from aboveground plant tissue averaged 40 to 72 lb N/A.

Quantification of these losses is important because it helps explain the fate of some applied N. In N efficiency calculations, it is not uncommon to account for only 50-55% of the N applied to a corn crop. Some have assumed that the rest is lost through leaching. This research shows that more N is taken up in the grain and stover than we account for by measuring N uptake at harvest.

Our research in Pennsylvania supports these results. In corn silage studies, we frequently see a reduction in crude protein (or N) with advancing maturity, even though yields are not increasing. This suggests that N is being lost from the plants. The mechanism of loss appears to be loss of ammonia from senescing plant tissue. Given that we usually have more late season foliar diseases on corn here than in the midwest we could speculate that we might have even greater losses of N from corn plants than those measured in these Nebraska studies.

"This machine will pay for itself in a year"
—Tom Krall

Tom Krall, a dairy farmer in Lebanon County, PA, installed a hammer mill from Automatic Farm Systems last spring. He feels it's been a very wise move financially.

"I had all my feed delivered, other than silage. Now I'll buy corn and barley cheaper, at harvest, and save on hauling and grinding. My initial cost, operating cost, and maintenance cost are all low. I expect this machine will pay for itself in a year."

"It's a pretty handy machine. It's all automatic, so it doesn't create any extra work. And it's not dusty like a roller mill because it's all enclosed."

Give us a call to learn how an AFS hammer mill will work on your dairy operation.

MANY GOOD THINGS COME FROM A KERNEL OF CORN
THE ENDOSPERM
The endosperm is about 82% of the kernel s dry weight and is the source of energy and protein (starch) for the germinating seed There are two types of endosperm, soft and hard In the hard endosperm, starch is packed tightly together, in the soft endosperm, the starch is loose When corn dries in the field before harvest, the mois ture loss causes the soft endosperm to collapse and form a dent in the top of the kernel
THE PERICARP
The pericarp is the outer cover ing of the kernel that protects it from deterioration It is water and water vapor resistant and is undesirable to insects and microorganisms
THE GERM
The germ is the only living part of the corn kernel It contains the essential genetic information, enzymes vit amins and minerals for the kernel to grow into a corn plant About 25% of the germ is corn oil Corn oil is the most valuable part of the corn kernel because of its amount of linoleic fatty acid (polyunsaturated fat) and its bland taste
THE TIP CAP
The tip cap is the only area of the kernel not covered by the pericarp It was the attachment point of the kernel to the cob It is the major entry path into the kernel

New York dairy producer is convinced . . .

"There is a difference in hybrids for corn silage"

As operator of a 250-cow milking herd near Adams, N.Y., Larry Stinson was intrigued by data from Cargill Hybrid Seeds showing that some corn hybrids harvested for corn silage are more digestible and have better feeding qualities than others.

"But even though I am a Cargill Hybrid Seeds dealer, I had to sell myself first," said Stinson. "The concept sounded interesting, but I wasn't going to recommend it to my customers before I was comfortable with the program. Like other dairymen, I had generally thought that corn silage was corn silage and that total tonnage per acre was about all that mattered."

To "field-test" the concept, Stinson filled two upright silos with two different Cargill hybrids. One contained a hybrid that the research showed to be more digestible than the other.

"Although it wasn't scientific research, I was amazed that cows fed from one of the silos consumed five pounds more dry matter of total ration and produced more pounds of milk per day than when they were fed from the other silo. Now I use the program to recommend silage hybrids for all of my customers," he said.

Wide Quality Differences

University and Cargill Hybrid Seeds research conducted since 1987 shows large differences in both forage and grain yields, and in silage-quality attributes for different hybrids. Cargill research shows the average hybrid differences for the following traits: Neutral detergent fiber (NDF)-17%; crude protein-14%; fiber (NDF) digestibility-12%; and whole plant digestibility-6%.

Those quality differences can amount to thousands of dollars per year from reduced soybean meal and corn supplement costs.

Dr. John Ferry, a dairy management consultant who works with Stinson, said hybrid differences in digestibility and other feeding traits have important bottom-line implications.

"I think we too often latch onto every feed product or gee-whiz thing that comes along that might increase total production without looking carefully at the cost implications," said Ferry. "But cost per hundredweight of milk is what's important. And hybrid selection for quality traits is an important method of improving production without increasing costs. Improved rumen digestibility means cows will consume more, increasing milk production. And by improving rumen digestibility we can reduce input costs from other feed sources," he said.

Hybrid Usage Advantage

Cargill Hybrid Seeds has developed a database of corn-silage traits that can be used to identify hybrid genetics with superior tonnage and enhanced feed value. The resulting menu—divided by maturity groups—lists key forage quality traits that show which hybrids within a maturity are best suited for corn silage production.

To determine the hybrids with the highest profit potential for your dairy or beef cattle, contact your local Cargill Hybrid Seeds dealer. Or, call 1-800-657-4810.

NCGA Celebrates 10 Years In St. Louis

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — This month the National Corn Grower Association (NCGA) celebrates a milestone. For 10 years now, corn growers have called St. Louis, Mo., the home of NCGA's world headquarters.

In early 1984, corn growers from NCGA's affiliated states —then 16 strong—agreed that their national organization needed a national office and a broad-based national program.

The farmers formed a search committee to evaluate sites and make recommendations. In a close vote, NCGA's farmer leaders chose St. Louis. The Gateway City offered a location central to the Corn Belt and a major airport. It was also home to many other agricultural groups.

It was August 1, 1984, when newly hired NCGA CEO Jeff Gain unlocked the door to NCGA's offices at 1000 Executive Parkway. "We had no budget. We had no staff. We had no program," recalled Gain. Every element wasn't in place. But, NCGA had grassroots support and a CEO willing to work from the foundation up.

"I felt personally challenged to build a whole new organization," said Gain. He had left the stability of the well-established American Soybean Association to come to work for corn growers. NCGA offered the enthusiasm of a young group. But Gain joined the team knowing NCGA's two previous attempts to establish a national headquarters had failed. The third time would be different.

The states, beginning with Illinois, supplied NCGA with start-up funds. Gain hired a staff. And, together, farmers and staff began developing programs that in 10 years time have made NCGA a leader among commodity groups.

"I remember my first 'real' NCGA annual meeting," said Gain. "It was in Indianapolis in July 1984, shortly before I started here. There were 200 people, 12 table-top displays in a small room, and corn growers lost $30,000 sponsoring it."

Today, that annual event is called Corn Classic. More than 2,000 farmers and industry leaders attend, agribusinesses sponsor more than 260 exhibits, and it's profitable.

Membership has also changed dramatically. Gain joined NCGA understanding there were 14,000 members. After purging the roster of duplicates, there were 11,500 members.

"I set a personal goal of reaching 30,000 members," said Gain. "We slowly began building our membership. We provided support to our states. And we started recognizing people for their efforts."

Today, more than 28,000 corn growers belong to NCGA. Oklahoma will soon become the 25th affiliated state. And more than 100 agribusinesses serve as corporate partners.

"Ten years ago, we were the upstart organization. People had their eyes on us. We took advantage of the attention. We focused on areas we could grow in, like ethanol and industrial uses," said Gain. "Our visibility and focus on new market opportunities have worked like a magnet. Farmers want to be involved in our organization."

Through NCGA, corn growers have had some monumental success stories: Ethanol's inclusion in the Clean Air Act, passage of the North American Free Trade agreement, establishment of the New Uses Council and USDA's Alternative Agriculture Research and Commercialization Center and development of new industrial markets like windshield washer fluid, printing inks and degradable packing materials.

What about the future? The next 10 years will offer new opportunities and challenges for corn growers and also for Gain. In October, Gain will leave NCGA and a new CEO will build on the framework he has established.

"It's hard to say in a few works, but I have very definite ideas about the future," said Gain. "Agriculture is changing before our eyes. There will be more alternative crops and more competition for land. Corn will be more valuable. We are going to see more corn grown with specific chemical compositions in the kernel.

"International trade will come back, particularly in Asia and South America. There will be a North and South American free trade zone. And it will even include Cuba," he said.

Much lies ahead for all of us. When Gain leaves NCGA, he will begin serving as an advisor to government officials and others on agricultural issues.

Show Them A Challenge, They'll Show Results

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Recovery from the flooding last year has been a slow process for many of the "Show Me" state corn growers. Some have lost as much as two and a half years of production, said Brian Stockman, director of programs and public relations for the Missouri Corn Growers Association (MCGA).

Not only did they lose the crop in the field, but many lost part of the prior year's harvest which was stored in bins, and couldn't plant this year's crop since deep sand deposits had not been removed or levees had not been replaced.

"In some areas, it looks like you're on a beach," he said. "It's hard to recover from that."

Gary Marshall, executive director for the MCGA and the Missouri Corn Merchandising Council (MCMC), confirms that fully 500,000 acres are still lying under sand with no levees. "This may not sound like much, but we're talking about thousands of people affected because we have the largest number of small farms of any state." That's not to mention more than 100,000 acres have been destroyed by hail this season, too.

As if all that weren't enough, Missouri corn growers are up to their ears in more concerns these days: "Environmental groups want to purchase 14,000 acres along the Missouri River (where farms are concentrated)," said Glen Riekhof, Concordia, Mo. farmer and president of the MCGA. "They want to spend up to $7 million to let it be a free-flowing area, a wetland, a wildlife sanctuary...rather than let farmers put back the levees."

Marshall has responded with a lobbying effort: "We're making sure our elected officials know the economic as well as the human problems of the issue. We want the levees fixed, and then go back and discuss other areas (for possible conversion)."

Another challenge for Missouri corn growers is getting a corn processing plant in-state: "We're the largest corn-growing state in the U.S. without an ethanol plant," Marshall said. The Council has recently budgeted a larger number of resources including checkoff dollars and energy to that effort for the upcoming year, he says.

"Our main goal is to get come kind of corn processing plant in the state by the end of this year," said Brian Munzlinger, Williamstown, Mo. farmer and chairman of the Council.

And there is yet another issue keeping Missouri farmers on the edge of their seat: Thousands of conservation reserve program (CRP) acres have their 10-year contracts coming up next year with the possibility they will be turned back into corn farming acres.

The Council has been keeping busy with ethanol promotion and education, both at the pump as well as in the grade schools. They have been very active on the radio with "Corn Talk," which is aired via several radio stations to all four corners of the state, and get involved at the state fair and numerous trade shows. They've sponsored a number of E-85 vehicles (85 percent ethanol-blended gasoline) and got the city of St. Louis to buy a fleet of them a few years ago. Munzlinger said they recently held a promotional day at one of the state's amusement parks, Six Flags.

Besides completing a feasibility study on putting in an ethanol plant, corn growers have funded research through the University of Missouri to make a time-delayed release system for some agricultural chemicals made from cornstarch. They are looking into making other degradable products from corn, as well, and have invested their share with other state corn checkoffs in studies at the Michigan Biotechnology Institute, Lansing, Mich.

But, some of the most important research the Council does is polling its own producers: "We've learned they want more accountability for research projects—they want to know what results we're after and how long it's going to take," said Marshall.

Narrow Rows, High Plant Density Cut Herbicide Use

ITHACA, N..Y. — Herbicides were cut 75 percent on no-till cornfields — without sacrificing yields — when the number of plants was doubled by narrowing the row spacing from 30 to 15 inches, a USDA scientist reports.

Doubling the number of corn plants from 26,000 to 52,000 per acre in narrower rows produced an average 150 bushels an acre — the same as yields from the standard plantings on no-till fields. Yields were based on the first three years of a 1989-92 study at the ARS Beltsville (Maryland) Agricultural Research Center.

The herbicides used were atrazine (Atrazine) and metolachlor (Dual). On plots with narrower rows and higher density, the same yield was achieved with only one-quarter pound of atrazine and one-half pound of metolachlor per acre — a fourth the normal rates.

"That's because the narrower rows and higher density of corn plants more rapidly create a leaf canopy that blocks sunlight from reaching weeds, preventing their growth," said USDA scientist John Teasdale. "Herbicides are needed to control weeds primarily during the period before the corn leaf canopy closes. Faster canopy closure with narrow rows and high planting density will mean significantly less herbicide than recommended in many cases."

Teasdale said that while much research has been done on the effect of row spacing and planting density with soybeans, less has been done with corn.

Nearly all the nation's corn and soybeans are treated with herbicides — particularly on no-till fields, which farmers do not plow to cut down on soil erosion. An estimated 500 million pounds of herbicide are used on U.S. cropland, with about 200 million pounds applied to cornfields alone.

Atrazine and metolachlor are among the most widely used herbicides — atrazine to control broadleaf weeds such as velvetleaf, pigweed, and lambsquarter, and metolachlor to kill grasses such as foxtail and crabgrass.

"These chemicals are called preemergence herbicides — meaning they are applied to the soil before crops emerge," Teasdale said. "That makes them more prone to movement into groundwater and surface water."

The narrow-row planting required fewer equipment changes than expected, for corn can be planted with a no-till planter equipped with a splitter to insert the narrow rows. And a combine with a conventional corn head harvested the 15-inch rows as efficiently as 30-inch rows. However, narrow tires are necessary for post-emergence agronomic operations, such as sidedressing nitrogen.

The only drawback to narrow-row corn spacing — at least in the short term — is economic. Teasdale says the cost of planting more seeds per acre could outstrip the herbicide savings by up to $10 per acre.

But if herbicides now used are eventually restricted, farmers may be forced to use other, more expensive herbicides.

Corn Growers, Partners Urged To Expand Investment

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Corn growers and their partners in the corn industry need to expand their investment of time and resources in value-added agriculture in order to survive into the year 2020, according to the findings of Corn Vision 2020. The executive summary of the year-long strategic planning research project was released recently.

Corn Vision 2020, cosponsored by National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) and Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., gathered 37 corn industry experts to identify the major trends which will shape the corn industry over the next 30 years and to recommend growth strategies.

"Corn Vision 2020 is the latest NCGA project to tap the expertise of a wide variety of specialists to help the association stay ahead of developments," said Randy Cruise, a farmer from Pleasanton, Neb., and chairman of the NCGA board. "The grower-leaders of NCGA already have a strategic plan in place. We'll use the insights gained from Corn Vision 2020 to increase corn profitability and usage."

Specifically, the panelists recommended that NCGA:

• Target affluent and populous Asia as the greatest export opportunity for corn in the form of value-added meats, milk, and eggs.

• Develop a value-added industry based on products of high quality, competitive price and unique features to replace shrinking export markets and diminishing government price supports.

• Join with U.S. livestock producers in measuring U.S. and foreign consumers' needs in order to more quickly develop desirable product traits and to take responsibility for the quality and safety of products.

• Recommit major public and private resources to research to prevent further erosion of the U.S.'s edge in production research by shifting towards agronomic efficiency and environmental compatibility, and utilization research by devoting at least 50 percent of effort to the commercialization of high-value industrial products which consume major quantities of corn.

• Make certain that policy makers consider risks and benefits as well as human and economic impacts in all regulations.

• Broaden NCGA's dialogue to include nonagricultural decision-makers and then developing individualized strategies for each audience which could influence the corn industry.

• Encourage corn growers to develop their individual strengths and then partner with other specialists to fill the gaps in their expertise.

More important than these specific policy recommendations were the panelists' advice that NCGA focus program and policy development in five broad areas as events unfold over the next 30 years. The five are understand that corn is a renewable, engineerable raw material for industrial products; communicate corn's role in the U.S. economy to consumers and policy makers; partner through mutually beneficial contracts with experts; reinvest with government and the private sector in utilization research in particular; and lead the entire industry in anticipating and taking maximum advantage of national and global trends.

"The goal of Pioneer has always been to help farmers make a better living. We realize that it is increasingly difficult for any individual to master the broad range of trends which shape the corn industry. That's why Pioneer saw Corn Vision 2020 as an opportunity to extend its long-term support of NCGA's leadership," said Connie Christensen, director of marketing for North American operations for Pioneer in Des Moines, Iowa.

Corn Vision 2020's emphasis on leadership reinforces NCGA's current efforts to:

• Shape public policy in the price support and environmental titles of the Farm Bill and through Ag for NAFTA.

• Build horizontal and vertical coalitions such as the Degradable Plastics Council and the Corn Research Evaluation Committee.

• Educate farm and nonfarm audiences through projects such as the school curriculum, "Corn - A National Renewable Resource" and proactive media relations about new markets for corn, such as ethanol, 100 percent cornstarch packing peanuts, and corn-based picnic cutlery.

• Initiate and promote new uses research and commercialization through NCGA's corn utilization conferences and the Corn Utilization Research Database as well as its integral role in the establishment of the New Uses Council and the Alternative Research and Commercialization Council.

THE WORLD OF CORN A COMPREHENSIVE LOOK

Wasp Can Help Control Corn Pests

Linda McCandless
New York State Agricultural Experiment Station At Geneva, Cornell

The newest good guy in the war being waged between the ears in the cornfields of New York may be a tiny parasitic wasp from China.

Cornell University researchers believe the release of tiny wasps that attack and kill the eggs of the European corn borer holds great potential for the sweet corn industry in controlling one of its major pests.

Cornell entomologists Tony Shelton and Michael Hoffmann are determining the best species of Trichogramma to release in commercial cornfields and the most cost-effective way to artificially rear massive quantities of the tiny wasps.

"So far, the use of Trichogramma ostriniae, a species imported from China by some of our colleagues in Massachusetts, has provided the best results," said Shelton, who has been involved in integrated pest management (IPM) research on sweet corn for more than 15 years.

In an attempt to permanently establish the wasps in New York, researchers have released four million of them over the last three years.

"If the wasp becomes established, it would continuously help control European corn borer at no expense to the growers," said Hoffmann, who has been working in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

"Scouts could sample the fields and, if the number of corn borers exceeded a threshold, then the wasps could be released rather than insecticide applied."

As part of a multifaceted management approach, Shelton has also been testing the use of commercially available Bt (Bacillus Thuringiensis) in a spray which is applied to corn foliage.

Larvae that ingest the bacteria stop feeding within a few hours and die. Bt is not harmful to beneficial insects in the field and allows for the introduction of natural enemies, such as wasps, which parasitize or consume Bt survivors. The current research builds on a proven program of pest management developed over the past decade at the Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva by the New York Sweet Corn Unified Management team — or SCUM, as they like to call themselves. With a little more than $125,000 invested in research and extension efforts, the team of entomologists, extension agents, and plant pathologists has managed to reduce pesticide use and save the processed sweet corn industry an average of $500,000 per year.

"Industry-wide adoption of proven IPM programs has already reduced the number of aerially applied insecticides in processed sweet corn fields by 30-70 percent," said team member Shelton. Unlike the case with most vegetable crops, it is the corn processors — and not the growers — who control the use of insecticides in the fields.

More than 90 percent of the New York industry is controlled by two companies, Comstock Michigan Fruit of Rochester and Seneca Foods of Marion, N.Y. In the past, processors would routinely spray all corn when it reached the early green tassel stage and then continue weekly treatments until harvest.

"The reason we were able to make such an impact on the industry as a whole is because so few make the decisions for so many acres," said Shelton, who was first asked to develop a pest management program for insects by sweet corn processors in 1981. "Growers who were using three to four sprays per field back in '81 are now down to an average of one."

The IPM package approach helped minimize the number of applications of insecticide. According to company spray records from 1990-1993 collected by IPM Coordinator Curt Petzoldt, growers who utilized IPM techniques averaged 0.9 to 1.3 insecticide sprays per field per year, a reduction of 55-65 percent, or well over 100 tons of insecticide that would have been applied to New York cornfields. Assuming a cost of $10 per acre spraying costs, and saving two sprayings per acre per season, that amounted to $1.8 million savings in insecticide costs over a three year period.

Even after subtracting increased scouting, pheromone trap purchases, and trap monitoring that average $3.18/acre, or $314,800 over 3 years, savings still amounted to $1.5 million, or $500,000 per year. The road from documented research to industry implementation is long.

"The current research in parasitic wasps and Bt is still in the early stages of development," said Shelton. "It took nearly 10 years for us to develop the current IPM program, test and demonstrate its effectiveness, and then get the sweet corn processors to adopt our recommendations on a wholesale basis. In the research business, that is really a very short time."

Environmentally Friendly Corn Grows Better Every Day

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Ask a corn grower what's new and you're likely to learn about a bumper crop of environmentally friendly corn-based products on supermarket shelves, at the gas pump and in the development pipeline.

Through the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA), corn growers have made a commitment to develop markets that meet consumer needs and help safeguard the environment.

"Corn growers are agriculture's innovators," said Pete Wenstrand, NCGA president. The Essex, Iowa, corn grower notes that Webster's Dictionary defines "innovative" as to make change; to do something in a new way. For NCGA, "innovative" means quickly and efficiently reaching farmer-established goals by utilizing farmer-initiated, farmer-led programs and policies.

Corn growers are looking beyond traditional feed and export markets to pioneer new industrial uses for their renewable resource, says Wenstrand. And these innovators of agriculture have made significant progress.

In 1975, food, seed and industrial use of corn accounted for 522 million bushels, reports USDA. By 1985, the food, seed and industrial market increased to 1.152 billion bushels. And in 1993, food, seed and industrial uses topped 1.575 billion bushels, according to preliminary estimates.

"Corn growers deserve a large measure of credit for this growth," said Wenstrand. "In our programs and policies, we have consistently committed to look toward the future."

NCGA played a leading role in establishing the New Uses Council to expand use of renewable resources in industrial and consumer products. Also, NCGA strongly supported USDA's Alternative Agriculture Research and Commercialization program to accelerate development of industrial new uses for agricultural commodities.

In "Growing Better Every Day," the theme of National Ag Week, NCGA has helped a number of new products make the leap from research lab to commercialization. Corn-derived citric acid increases the cleaning power of laundry detergents. Packing peanuts made of nearly 100 percent cornstarch are totally water soluble. Corn-based inks are rapidly replacing petroleum-based printer's inks. Super Slurper, a super absorbent cornstarch that absorbs up to 300 times its weight, is used in diapers and fuel filters.

Degradable disposable cutlery and golf tees made from cornstarch are nudging into commercial markets. And corn-based CMA (calcium magnesium acetate), a noncorrosive road deicer, is a few short research steps away from commercialization.

At the top of NCGA's list of successful efforts to "grow better" would be its campaign to secure market share for ethanol.

The failure of the tester system to adjust yields may be due to several reasons. First, the variations in fields are not always consistent in one direction. This is obvious to anyone who has flown over Pennsylvania farmland. Secondly, hybrids may not react the same way to gradients in productivity We know that some hybrids are more sensitive to drought stress, for example, than others. And finally, the tester system spreads the test out over more land and there is a greater chance to encounter more variation.

This study shows that we should reconsider how we design hybrid strip trials. Some good basic rules to follow on designing strip trials include 1) keep the number of entries as low as possible, 2) replicate if possible, 3) limit the test to hybrids of a similar maturity (or group the hybrids by maturity in the test) and 4) don't rely only on the results of a single trial.

Expanded Borders Good For Corn Growers

Randy Cruise
Outgoing NCGA President

Like Chicken Little, many of the critics of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) fear the unknown or unfamiliar. But a careful examination of the facts and "what-if" scenarios posed by NAFTA points to the potential for American farmers to reap tremendous benefits if Congress ratifies NAFTA.

When my grandfather farmed 50 years ago, much of what he grew was sold to local farmers' markets. Today, our soybean farmers sell every third row of their crop to export markets. Pork producers market 2.43 percent of their production to foreign markets; while beef producers typically export more than 9 percent of the wholesale value of production. On my own farm, I can expect that almost one out of every five bushels of corn harvested will be shipped to other countries.

In a cutthroat world where many countries feel free to erect trade barriers virtually overnight, I can't afford to be overly hesitant of change. NAFTA will link the U.S., Canada and Mexico into the world's largest free trade zone with more than 360 million people and a combined annual output exceeding $6 trillion — strengthening the position of North American exports in competition with those of the European Community and the Pacific Rim countries.

We've already experienced the benefits of a free trade agreement with Canada. Since the U.S. - Canada Free Trade Agreement was ratified four years ago, our agricultural exports to Canada have more than doubled from $2 billion to $4.6 billion. Canada is now our No. 1 customer for high - value farm exports, taking almost one-fifth of what we produce.

Already, Mexico is our third largest trading partner and our fastest growing agricultural export market. NAFTA will provide for total market access for U.S. agricultural products within 15 years. And contrary to one popular myth, Mexicans have money to spend. The average Mexican will spend $450 a year on U.S. products, while a Japanese — who earns eight times as much as his Mexican counterpart — will only spend $385.

So what's to fear from NAFTA? Very little. Without NAFTA, there's virtually a one-way free trade agreement in Mexico's favor right now. In agriculture, Mexican tariffs currently range from 10 to 20 percent (with the legal right to raise them to 50 percent), plus Mexico retains a highly restrictive import licensing system for a number of key U.S. export commodities. The U.S. has much lower duties, averaging less than four percent, and more than half of ag imports from Mexico already enter duty-free or subject to an insignificant tariff.

Like any trade agreement, NAFTA involves sacrifice to achieve gains. Many critics have voiced concern that NAFTA will cost jobs in the U.S. But we must accept the challenge of discovering the job opportunities NAFTA represents. For example, Iowa produces about one-fourth of the hogs raised in the U.S. If NAFTA accelerates demand for pork, there will be new jobs in livestock breeding, feed milling, veterinary services, and meat—packing.

When my grandfather raised his crops 50 years ago, he carefully cultivated the local buyers as a market to keep and expand not one to limit. That much about farming hasn't changed. Chicken Little was wise to consider the sky when the acorn first fell. But she should have looked more carefully. The sky didn't fall on Chicken Little. She simply got a wake-up call to expand the borders of her familiar world. A ratified NAFTA can do the same for agriculture.

Grain Buyers Analyze Corn Quality

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — With the dramatic weather conditions we've seen the past two years, grain quality is at issue from field to transporter, exporter to processor. Some of the problems the pros are expecting to see include:

• Heavy rains and flooding: "When there are stresses such as saturated soils, standing water, cloud cover and sufficient sunlight, it affects the rate of growth of the kernel," said Gene Faron, supervisor of specialty corn at American Maize Products Co. "The whole process of starch, protein and oil synthesis is slowed down or stopped." This usually results in lower test weight. Faron warns about storage problems: "Microbial growth will occur more rapidly and the components in the kernel are metabolized by bacteria and fungi in bins with excess moisture. It produces bad odors and flavors which aren't acceptable to food processors." This year's crop that was flooded early probably won't be harvested, claims Jim Stitzlein of Consolidated Grain and Barge, a Japanese-owned originator of grain. He says this corn is best used for feed as close to the source as possible.

• High winds: When stalks are blown in one direction, the corn may be wet since it's so close to the ground, said Stitzlein. "The hardest thing is for a farmer to harvest it." There's a tendency for more mold to be on the corn than usual. Faron suggests running it through a cleaner to remove fine broken material.

• Hail: Damage is very dependent on the stage of development of the plant, said Faron. If it's early, when the plant is only 1-2 feet tall, it can stunt its growth. "This means that it will be maturing later in cooler months which is not good. It could freeze," he said. If hail damage occurs when ears are developing, it can cause bruising, which produces lesions or points of entry for mold invasions or deterioration. "Yield loss is more significant than quality loss," said Stitzlein.

• Severe droughts: Aflatoxin is more prevalent during droughts because the mold that causes it is more competitive than other molds who can't survive the conditions, says Faron. "If it's over 20 parts per billion, it isn't usable for normal trade, but may be fed to certain species of livestock," said Stitzlein. It can also reduce a plant's ability to fill in kernels with starch, protein and oil, said. Faron. "It can affect the type and level of development of starch. The type of protein laid down in the early stages is different than in the later stages of kernel development, too."

Both experts anticipate the grain quality to affect their companies this year. "It affects the rate at which we can process," said Faron. The most disastrous problem, though, is when corn is harvested at very high moisture (30-percent or greater) and dried at very high temperatures (excess of 180 degrees F): "The starch becomes essentially cooked inside the kernel," he said. American Maize has developed a screening procedure to detect this occurrence. Faron said, bad weather does mean his company has to spend more money to find other sources of corn, if necessary.

Neither company likes to alienate a farmer who has had a bad year. "We try not to abandon our suppliers," said Faron. "We try to work with them and help them to understand what we're looking for. Farmers do a very good job to avoid these problems."

At publication time, there hasn't yet been sufficient corn to test this year, but Faron suspects there will be high harvest moisture coupled with high temperature drying. "But the jury's still out. We're waiting on the first heavy frost. Then we'll know."

NCGA Delegates Outline New Priorities

DENVER, Colo. — Corn growers from around the country outlined the mission for the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) and set the stage for future policy actions during the 1994 Corn Classic, February 27-March 1 in Denver, Colo.

During two days of voting delegate sessions, 260 corn growers considered hundreds of resolutions and amendments.

The mission statement of the NCGA and the National Corn Development Foundation captures the broad role that this organization plays: "to enhance corn profitability and usage to improve the quality of life in a changing world."

To achieve these goals, NCGA re-emphasized their commitment to activities, such as supporting programs that expand corn consumption and utilization, cooperating with other farm organizations to promote a more unified voice for agriculture and voluntarily adopting "environmentally-sound" soil management techniques.

Highlights of the voting delegate session:

• NCGA leaders continued their support for fair and open trade and encouraged Congress to ratify the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). They also offered support for USDA's Market Promotion Program (MPP), which can expand commercial export markets. The delegates requested that Congress fund the MPP at the currently approved program level of $100 million, rather than the $75 million requested by President Clinton in his 1995 budget plan.

• With several exciting prospects for new corn uses on the horizon, delegates urged the NCGA and state affiliates to work with government, university and industry representatives to develop a comprehensive national corn research strategy before passage of the 1995 Farm Bill. They also urged Congress to fund Alternative Agricultural Research and Commercialization (AARC) program at the full level authorized by the 1990 Farmbill.

• When Congress considers future farm program legislation, NCGA delegates asked them to include initiatives that would assure opportunities for improved profitability, enhance demand for basic commodities and value-added products, establish a national policy to utilize agricultural products as renewable resources, provide income support, and reduce the complexity of farm programs.

NCGA went on record as supporting additional flexibility for farmers to rotate their program crop base acres to other crops for environmental benefits. They also encouraged discussion of revenue assurance as part of the 1995 Farm Bill without endorsing any specific proposal. The concept, which emerged from the Iowa Farm Bill Task Force, would guarantee farmers a portion (such as 70-percent) of their expected gross receipts.

This type of program would replace the current system of deficiency payments, crop insurance and disaster programs.

• Delegates devoted considerable time to discussing the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP), which has idled about 36.5 million acres. Unless Congress acts to continue the program, the first acres will start to come out from under their ten-year contracts in late 1995, and 22 million acres could be unleashed by 1997. NCGA encouraged lawmakers to continue implementing the program with the following guidelines in mind: extensions of expiring contracts should be subject to competitive bidding; encourage haying and grazing instead of crop production on expiring CRP contracts; tree planting should be encouraged; enrollment and renewal of contracts should be targeted to the most environmentally sensitive land such as field borders, large waterways and other areas needed for conservation compliance. Increased emphasis should be placed on water quality; target areas should be allowed to be managed in such a manner that would not disrupt the normal management of the entire field; and individual states should be allowed to start on conservation work prior to the land coming out of the CRP.

• Corn growers support increased funding for federal quality programs, including USDA's Water Quality Incentive Program and nonpoint source pollution programs authorized by the Clean Water Act.

NAFTA Opens Up Markets

WASHINGTON, D.C. — "The best news we have had in some time is that U.S. corn producers will sell at least 2.5 million metric tons (mmt) (98.5 million bushels) of corn to Mexico every year," said Mark DeVore, upon returning from the U.S. Feed Grains Council's Market Assessment Mission.

DeVore represented the Nebraska Corn Board on the mission that traveled to Canada and Mexico to study opportunities to increase exports to these markets.

"The North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) and PROCAMPO open up new opportunities in Mexico for corn producers.

"There is still some questions as to who will receive the 2.5 mmt (98.5 mbu) duty-free quota," DeVore said. "However, based on our meetings, it looks like the wet milling industry and food industries will get the majority share."

The Mexican government and industry groups will determine which sectors receive the duty-free corn quota from the United States. Mexico's wet milling industry currently utilizes 1-1.5 mmt (39.4 to 59.1 mbu) of corn annually.

"They are already using U.S. corn, it is a matter of increasing the amount they use," DeVore said. "At the wet mill we visited, there were several trucks full of Nebraska waxy corn waiting to be processed."

"Almost as important as NAFTA is Mexico's new domestic agricultural policy, PROCAMPO," DeVore said. "Producers will be paid based on owned acreage, not the amount and type of crop they produce. There will no longer be the incentive to plant corn, for which they were guaranteed double the world price, and it is expected that corn acreage will decrease."

Mexico's old agricultural policy paid producers double the world price for corn and this encouraged its production at the expense of other crops.

When You Plant CFS Waxy Hybrids, You're Planting More Than Just Corn.

Facts prove that starch content is what makes corn the ideal animal feed. And that's what makes CFS Waxy Corn different from dent. CFS Waxy is 100% amylopectin starch...zero percent amylose. (Dent is 25% amylose).

Amylopectin starch is more digestible. That means CFS Waxy maintains no less than a 25% advantage over dent...in the feedlot or milking parlor.

On-farm tests show the average weight gain/feed efficiency in beef, sheep, swine and other animals fed waxy corn increased up to 10% over dent fed animals.

In dairy herds CFS Waxy increased butterfat, protein and milk production.

And, CFS waxy can be produced as a cash crop...often bringing premium prices when used for export.

Faster weight gain, more milk and flexibility...that's why CFS Waxy hybrids are more than just corn.

Dupont Teams Up With PMCGA For New Members

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) —The PMCGA board of directors recently announced at its August board meeting a new membership program in cooperation with Dupont. This program is targeted at recruiting new members of PMCGA.

Any Pennsylvania corn grower who joins PMCGA for three years for the first time is eligible to recieve a free four-acre sample of Accent herbicide ($100 retail value).

Dupont representative Duane Hobbs, who was instrumental in developing the program, said, "We are really interested in seeing corn growers belonging to organizations like PMCGA and NCGA to face the issues that challenge corn producers in today's world."

The offer is available to anyone who grows more than five acres of corn and has not been a member of PMCGA before and who has not received a Accent sample in the past.

There is a limit of one sample per farming operation. In addition new, three-year members can elect to participate in our Membership Incentive Program and elect to try a free unit of seed corn from one of the participating companies on the membership application.

If you've been thinking about joining PMCGA, now's the time! Clip the form from Corn Talk and send it in.

Corn Hybrid Selection Important

DEL VOIGHT
Lebanon County
Extension Agent
Hybrid Selection

Selecting hybrids is probably the most important decision that a corn producer makes each year. It is not unusual for one hybrid to out yield another by 30 bushels or more. The difference in profitability between the high yielding varieties and low yielding varieties in the Pennsylvania Yield test may be as much as $100/acre. At 80,000 kernels/bag, and 20,000 plants/acre, a bag will plant four acres. When comparing the best varieties with poorest varieties, that bag of seed corn that plants four acres is worth about $400 more than the bag of poor seed corn.

Numerous tests have shown that choosing the right variety is probably the most important decision that a corn grower can make. You can buy seed for $50 to $80 a bag. Seed with a fancy price tag isn't necessarily a good indication of the kind of net profit that it will produce. One must always figure net return. When there is a possible $100 an acre difference, that $10 to $20 extra per bag of seed is actually a very minor consideration.

How To Figure Profitability

Farmers traditionally choose hybrids according to yield, with secondary consideration given to standability and thirdly to dry down for and early harvest. But now, with the rising cost of energy, the rate of dry down is becoming more important. More farmers are looking for hybrids that dry down more rapidly in the field. Full season hybrids generally yield more. However, some earlier hybrids approach full season hybrids in yield and may be several points lower in moisture.

Corn starts to lose moisture in the field as it approaches physiological maturity. Physiological maturity is the time at which the plant adds no more dry weight to the kernel. At this point a "black layer" forms just under the kernel tip. Once this point is reached it is only a matter of drying it down to harvestable condition.

What's The Tradeoff In Yield Versus Dry Down?

A hybrid harvested at 28-percent moisture must yield about five bushel more than a hybrid harvested at 22-percent moisture to pay for drying costs. It all depends on yield, grain market price, grain moisture, and your expenses in drying. If you dry your own corn it will likely cost you $12-$15 an acre to dry corn from 28-percent to 22-percent moisture. With corn from 2.75 to 3.00 a bushel, one would have to have a five bushel increase in yield for the wetter corn in order to cover the price of drying.

If you take your corn to the elevator to be dried, it will cost you 5-6 cents per point of moisture. So if the price was $3.00 a bushel and the difference in moisture was 6 points you would receive 30 cents per bushel LESS for the wetter corn. If your yield level was at 100 bu/acre, then the cost of drying the wet variety down to the level of the drier variety would be approximately $30/acre and the yield difference would have to be 10 mented that continuous corn, for example, can degrade the soil structure, which is the soil's ability to form granules and have good "tilth." It is also known that intensive tillage can reduce soil structure and "burn up" organic matter in the soil by introducing oxygen in the soil.

Tillage can also reduce earthworm populations. We also know that when soils are intensively cropped and few crop residues are returned to the field, organic matter and other soil quality factors will slowly decline.

In addition, traffic on soils with heavy manure equipment and silage wagons can cause compaction, which is not always overcome with subsequent tillage operations.

This summer I visited one farm where the corn "just doesn't grow like it used to." Unfortunately, that hasn't been the first time I heard that comment recently. The farmer proceeded to tell me about his system. The two fields behind the barn had been cropped to corn silage for the last 20 years or so. Each fall or spring they received a healthy dose of liquid manure and were chisel plowed, disked, and planted.

Corn growth has been uneven, weed pressure heavy, and the field has a healthy dose of corn rootworm beetles. Heavy rains seem to run off more than infiltrate. He has been reluctant to rotate because his hay fields are hilly and his conservation plan is very limiting in terms of the amount of corn that he can grow there.

As I thought about the problem, I began to realize that there were many factors here that could contribute to a decline in soil quality — continuous corn, intensive tillage, no cover crop over the winter, and frequent heavy traffic on the fields. Even the manure he was applying — a low-organic-matter, nitrogen-rich slurry would have a lot less beneficial effect on the soil organic matter than the solid manure his grandfather applied to the fields a generation before. On top of those factors, pest problems aggravated by continuous corn were building and reducing the crop's ability to compensate for the lousy soil conditions.

There are a lot of fields in Pennsylvania which get treated in a similar fashion and still grow decent corn. This suggests to me that soils vary somewhat in their ability to tolerate some of these abuses. Some of the deep, loamy, very productive soils in the southeast part of the state, for example, have been cropped to corn for more than 30 years continuously and still produce top yields. My observations would indicate the potential for problems would be most on soils that are shallower or have been eroded and are a bit "clayey" in texture.

Lets discuss the options I suggested to the farmer I met earlier this summer.

It would be great if he could rotate the field into hay for a few years and possibly no-till his corn into existing hay fields to meet conservation requirements. Another option might be to get a rye cover crop established immediately after silage harvest. A good crop of rye in the fall could help loosen the soil, build soil structure, and help to return some organic matter to the soil. This may be enough to turn the situation around. To go one step further, I'd recommend eliminating the tillage for corn planting as much as possible and applying the manure in early spring, killing the rye early, and planting when the soil is fit. This would eliminate tillage and should help to improve soil tilth and soil organic matter. We may have to compromise here and spread our manure on the surface, but the rye cover and N accumulated from the cover crop should help to offset the N lost from a surface manure application.

He could also consider irrigating manure on the fields. This would eliminate the traffic from manure hauling and the resulting soil compaction. Other possible solutions could also be developed to address this problem, but almost all require some additional expense or compromises.

I've seen a number of beautiful corn fields this year and many of them in cropping systems that include factors such as short corn rotation, irrigating manure, early planted cover crops, or more reliance on no-tillage.

So, it is possible to avoid soil problems with some conventional techniques.

If you think you are encountering soil quality problems, consider addressing them by eliminating one or more of the factors that we know is associated with this decline — continuous corn, traffic, lack of crop residue, or intensive tillage.

If you've done your homework, your corn will show dramatic improvements.

bu./acre in order to make up for the added drying costs. Many farmers don't know what it costs to dry a bushel of corn on their own farm but they do know what it costs when they take it to the elevator. For years, growers have looked too strongly at yield and not enough at the energy costs involved in drying down those high yielding wet varieties.

Crosses

There are many types of crosses that are available. The most common is the single cross where one inbred is bred to another inbred and the resulting hybrid takes on the characteristics of the whichever parent the seed company determines. The single cross is used the most because with good isolation in the seed field the offspring should be totally uniform and since it is uniform, should have the greatest high end yield potential.

The problem seed companies have is getting isolation in the seed field. You see, if a seed producer has a seed field next to regular field corn some pollen may drift into the seed field and contaminate the seed field. Thus, it is imperative that you keep your eye open and question sales representatives about their isolation. Also, check in your field if it is a single cross and see if the hybrids show the same characteristics, is the ear height the same, kernels the same, plant height the same etc. They should be identical. If not you might have gotten contaminated seed.

Pennsylvania Corn Hybrid Test

The test of commercially available hybrids are conducted each year at several locations in each of the maturity zones in Pa. The tests include both the grain and silage results. If you need a copy of the test, please stop by the extension office and pick one up. Again, they are free and add an unbiased source of information to further research a variety you may be looking at to plant.

The Pennsylvania Hybrid Test includes moisture percent, bushels/acre, percent erect (this means percent of stand that did not lodge or fall down), ear and plant height and its rating of resistance to gray and northern leaf spot. Although this is not a complete listing of the traits of different varieties, it does give what is needed to make a decision on varieties. One should review information in the seed guides various companies publish. They give good information on the specific traits of hybrids, growing degree days/maturity days, nitrogen requirement etc.

Other Considerations

1. Is the variety adapted to your area? Check maturity zones in Pa. Lebanon county is in zone 3 and 4. Zone 3 would probably break at the line of highway 422. You can determine your own zone by looking at the Yield Test.

2. What are you using the crop for- silage, grain or both? If for grain, you must be concerned with fall frost to maximize yield and test weight. If silage, then you are concerned with tonnage through green leaf and stalk growth. For both

(Turn to Page 26)

	High	Low	AVG	-50	GDD
Day 1	65	50	57.5	7.5	7.5
Day 2	75	60	67.5	17.5	17.5
Day 3	77	63	70	20	20
Day 4	80	55	67.5	17.5	17.5
Day 5	86	61	73.5	23.5	23.5
Day 6	80	60	70	20	20
Day 7	70	50	60	10	10
Total GDD					116

Your corn should be at spike or out of the ground at 110 GDD.

You would use this system to track your corn throughout the season. But, also use it to select varieties to fit into your specific area by heat units (GDD). Researchers have established that corn will not grow under 50 degrees and will not grow any faster at temperatures above 86. So if its 90 degrees for the high in the day put 86 degrees for the high and if its below 46 degrees during the day insert 50 for the low.

4. Spread your risk of serious stress damage to your corn by selecting hybrids that flower at different times. Most seed companies can supply you with the flowering times. I would split my acres into early, mid, and late, flowering type hybrids. The reason to avoid planting the exact same variety is that if stress such as drought hits at the pollen silking time (flowering) then you could lose some serious yield whereas if you spread the pollen silking times over more weeks you can prolong the risk of stress.

5. Look at dry down, is it going to be wet when you want to harvest? Never select a variety without at least three year data meaning three years of testing for yield, moisture, test weight etc. Most companies can obtain that varieties test results before it hits the market so ask for it. Basically, drydown is effected by the hybrids husk whether its open or closed. The more open husk should dry more rapidly.

6. Going no-till? Then don't plant the same variety you used last year. Think about it, the same stover is there harboring disease organisms and if you put the same hybrid in the field those disease organisms are right there ready to jump on the new plant. So, switch to a different hybrid.

7. What size kernel should I plant? Probably plateless planter(pp) type. Normally, you get an extra 10,000 kernels in a bag with (pp) and most planters will take them as long as you don't need plates in them. Check with your sales representative to see if they have plateless type seed available or give me a call and I'll find out.

Conclusion

These are only some thoughts on what questions to raise when selecting a variety. Please call me if you need additional information, if the information is unclear, or would like to discuss your particular situation.

We looked at some areas to be considered when buying hybrids and found that the cost of the bag is not as important as whats in the bag. Do some research - check Penn State Yields, seed company technical sheets, and three-year performance data.

KINZE ROW UNITS

You start with a simple, dependable row unit design with easy adjustments that give you exact depth control, and the most ideal seed-to-soil contact possible. At KINZE we call it "Precision Placement." Simply put, it's the toughest most dependable system in the field today.

How does it work? At the exact point of seed placement, 15" double disc openers and dual gauge wheels combine to mold a clean, consistent V-formed seed trench at a pre-set depth. Trailing V-closing wheels then securely press the seed trench walls on each side of the seed for positive seed-to-soil contact, virtually eliminating air pockets and leaving a loose "hill" of soil on top of the seed. It's the ideal environment for the emerging seeding.

Each row unit is independently adjustable for depth and down pressure. Spring-loaded parallel arms give you all the flexibility you need. Down pressure? Your choice. Standard, quick-adjustable dual springs for conventional planting, or quad springs (shown right) for conservation tillage. Each with four positions so you can set the unit's down force for your conditions.

Stats Show 92 Percent Of Plans On Schedule

WASHINGTON, D.C. — USDA's Soil Conservation Service reports that approximately 92 percent of the compliance plans required on highly-erodible cropland are on schedule to be fully in place at the beginning of 1995.

As the nation's most intensive conservation effort heads into the homestretch, an overwhelming number of farmers are meeting the deadline for protecting highly erodible croplands. A U.S. Department of Agriculture Soil Conservation Service (SCS) survey shows 92 percent of conservation plans for highly erodible croplands are on schedule with 50 percent complete as of 1993.

SCS says the statistically reliable survey sample came from on-site reviews of 53,000 conservation plans covering 8 million acres.

In addition to the 92 percent of plans on schedule, another 4.7 percent of the plans reviewed had been granted one-year extensions, or variances. Extensions are granted when producers have made the best effort possible to keep on schedule but could not due to uncontrollable circumstances, such as hardship or weather, or factors which had minimal impact on accomplishing the erosion reduction goals.

SCS estimates that soil erosion on our most highly erodible lands will be less than half what it was in 1985 — reduced about 66 percent— if plans are fully implemented by the December 31, 1994 deadline. That estimate is based on estimated national erosion averages going from 17.5 tons of soil annually lost per acre in 1985 when compliance was mandated in the 1985 farm act to six tons per acre by the end of this year. In all, plans are required on about 144 million acres of highly-erodible cropland.

SCS Chief Paul Johnson says that agriculture is well on its way in carrying out "the most intensive conservation effort ever undertaken on private lands. Most farmers have made great progress in reducing soil erosion," he says. Ironically, Johnson's home state of Iowa had the lowest rate of plans on schedule, 78.6 percent. Iowa ranks fourth in the amount of highly-erodible land in the U.S., behind Montana, Texas and Kansas.

"The public wants good land stewardship," Johnson said, "Just as other businesses have had to change the way they operate to protect the environment, agriculture has also accepted the challenge."

grain and silage then you are concerned with both frost and green leaf and stalk growth. Select maturity according to your goal with the crop.

3. How many frost free days are available during the growing season? Generally speaking, Lebanon has a total of 130 days or range of 2400-2800 heat units (the accumulated units per day throughout a season). You should get in the habit of refering to hybrids by Growing Degree Days (GDD) which is nothing more than the average temperature (heat units) in a day minus 50. For example, the weather forecaster says the high today was 80 degrees and the low was 58. Now, to get the average temperature simply add the high and low and divide by two. So, 80+58 = 138 divide by two = 69. Now that you have the average, subtract it from 50. 69 was the average and we subtract 50 and get 19. That's it! 19 is the amount of GDD for that day. You would do this everyday after you plant and add the days together. For example it takes corn 119 GDD to come out of the ground. So, after you plant you, note the days like this.

What good is a combine without people behind it?

HOOBER PEOPLE KNOW

case IH axial flow combines!

You can't go anywhere in Pennsylvania and get combine service support like you get at HOOBERS.

HOOBER has:

1) (5) factory-trained mechanics who work full time on combines - 2 have worked on combines since IH introduced the 1st axial-flow in 1977.

2) (5) combine service trucks, fully-equipped with welders, air compressors, hoists, combine parts so they can go to the problem and fix it fast.

3) A service manager just for combines. Don Carper has managed Hoober's combine service department for 15 years.

Don Carper

IT'S TIME FOR YOU TO TRY A HOOBER-RECONDITIONED COMBINE!

Hoober's reconditioned axial flow combines aren't finished after 1,500 hours, or 2,500 hours, or 3,500 hours or 4,500 hours or (?) hours!
